

Exon's Veto Of School Aid Bill To Face Override Attempt

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A decision on the hottest issue of the Eighty-third Legislature — increased state aid to schools — will come down to the wire Friday when the Legislature on its final day for action will consider overriding Gov. J. James Exon's veto of LB472.

At a press conference Wednesday, Exon said the absence of a limit on school budgets past the 1976 school year and an "unfair" shift in taxes benefitting the affluent prompted his veto.

Exon did sign what supporters of LB472 regard as a stop-gap measure at best, LB172, which earmarks $20 million in federal revenue sharing funds for state aid to education in 1974.

In signing LB172, Exon gave up plans to cut the state sales tax by 1/4% next year but said he still intends to chop the state income tax from 15% to 10% next year depending on what the Legislature does Friday.

The veto did not surprise Sen. Jerome Warner, LB472's prime sponsor. Even before Exon announced his veto, Warner filed a motion with the clerk of the Legislature to override the anticipated veto.

Nevertheless, the charges and countercharges which have been exchanged throughout the session continued.

In a telephone interview after the veto message, Warner remarked, "The only conclusion I can reach is that he is opposed to property tax relief, pure and simple."

Exon, pointing out the window of his conference room towards the office buildings lining the 15th St. Mall, questioned whether "big business" rather than the homeowner would be the benefactor of Warner's property tax plan.

LB472, he said, "is a scheme to shift unfairly a large burden to average and lower income Nebraskans to the benefit of the more affluent."

"The measure, for example, would provide that business and corporate interests would receive an average initial tax break of $1.50 on property tax for every $1 of increased sales and income taxes paid while homeowners would pay increased sales and income taxes at the rate of $2 for every $1 in real estate savings."

Warner questioned those figures saying he certainly has seen no justification of those assessments of LB472's impact.

In addition, Exon charged that the bill would require a 1% increase in the sales tax and a 5% hike in income tax to finance it while lacking an effective lid on school budgets beyond the period of implementation.

Warner said that a permanent lid on school budget increases would have to be flexible enough to adjust yearly in any event to reflect inflation and that a flat percentage might be detrimental to the schools.

LB472 would be implemented over two years and would ultimately provide $140 million annually in state aid, or roughly 50% of the public schools' operating costs. The state is now providing $35 votes; 30 will be needed to override.

The bill originally had a 5% lid on increases in school district expenditures but was subsequently altered to a more complicated formula and limited to the two-year implementation period.

Exon said this change was accomplished by a "sleight of hand" during the legislative process, but Warner denied it saying the alteration was known to all senators.

For CIA Coverup Role . . .

Walters Blamed By Ehrlichman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House adviser John D. Ehrlichman Wednesday blamed the Central Intelligence Agency's deputy director, Vernon Walters, for the CIA's role in the Watergate coverup.

Ehrlichman also said he can't recall asking the CIA to help E. Howard Hunt, challenging testimony by former CIA deputy Robert Cushman.

Ehrlichman, who quit as chief White House domestic adviser last April 30, testified behind closed doors to the intelligence subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee. He later gave newsmen a 17-page transcript of his prepared testimony.

Subcommittee Chairman John McClellan, D-Ark., said later there has been seriously conflicting testimony in his hearings. He scheduled former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman for an appearance Thursday.

Ehrlichman's statement dealt with two matters. One was the 1971 burglary by Hunt and others of Dr. Lewis Fielding, a psychiatrist who treated Pentagon Paper defendant Daniel Ellsberg. The other was an attempt to limit the FBI's investigation of last year's Watergate wiretapping.

Ehrlichman's account of the Watergate matter generally supports a statement by President Nixon last week. Nixon said he ordered Ehrlichman and Haldeman to ensure that the FBI's investigations into Watergate didn't uncover secret operations by the CIA or White House agents.

Ehrlichman said Walters and CIA Director Richard Helms met with him and Haldeman in late June, 1972. Helms and Walters said the CIA hadn't been involved in Watergate and that an FBI investigation wouldn't uncover any past CIA operations.

But Ehrlichman said Walters gave an "equivocal response" to a question about whether any ongoing CIA activities in Mexico might be uncovered. Walters was then ordered to contact acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III and "give him all the facts."

Gray has testified that Walters told him to postpone FBI interviews with two men, one of them a Mexican lawyer, whose checks supplied a financial link between the Watergate wiretappers and the Nixon re-election committee. Gray said Ehrlichman interfered with his efforts to straighten the matter out, and that he once warned Nixon that he was being mortally wounded by men around him.

Ehrlichman painted the matter as a misunderstanding. "In retrospect, had General Walters at the June 1972 meeting said to Mr. Haldeman and me the things he apparently said later, . . . Had we been told flatly there was no 'Mexican connection' to the CIA at that time, that would have ended the matter as far as I was concerned," Ehrlichman said.

On the Ellsberg matter, Ehrlichman would not flatly contradict the testimony of former CIA deputy director Cushman, but he said he has no evidence or recollection to support it.

Cushman swore Ehrlichman called him around July 7, 1971, "and stated that Howard Hunt was a bona fide employee, a consultant on security matters and that Hunt would come to see me and request assistance which Mr. Ehrlichman requested that I give."

Hunt requested and received disguises, forged identification papers, a camera, a recorder, and other gear which he used in the Ellsberg break-in. Ehrlichman and CIA officials alike say now they were unaware of the burglary until after it happened.

Ehrlichman testified Wednesday that he hasn't "even the faintest recollection" of calling Cushman about Hunt. In another Watergate development, the Justice Department Wednesday denied that a special intelligence unit had engaged in active spying.

Sources close to the Watergate investigation said Justice Department agents of the Intelligence Evaluation Committee intercepted mail, tapped telephones, audited income-tax returns and planted informers. The sources said the IEC became "a cover for a secret police operation" soon after it was formed in December 1970.

Council Chairwoman Helen Boosalis told The Star. She noted that she had not seen the mayor's budget — only some of his proposals for use of the revenue sharing money.

Projects outlined for funding by the mayor for the third revenue sharing entitlement totaling $954,141 include such capital improvement projects as storm sewers, paving, a new fire station and engine, a station library, tree planting and subsidies to the Lincoln Transportation System and the Lincoln Police Department.

Mrs. Boosalis pointed out that some of the city lawmakers have voiced their discontent over these recommendations since no "people" programs were included for funding.

"Obviously some human services will be needed to be taken care of," she stated.

Until a public hearing on uses of revenue sharing funds is held, Mrs. Boosalis said the council "won't know which programs will be hit by loss of federal funds and which we should pick up."

"That public hearing is set for 7 p.m. June 12 in the City Council Chambers."

Bradley Goes To Work

Sam Yorty Dumped As Mayor Of L.A.

. . . Rapid Transit Is Top Priority

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor-elect Thomas Bradley went immediately to work Wednesday, pledging to give auto-clogged Los Angeles an operating rapid transit system in four years.

Bradley, 55, defeated incumbent Sam Yorty by nearly 100,000 votes Tuesday after a campaign in which he charged Yorty with neglecting critical problems in the city.

Bradley will take office July 1 as the first black mayor of Los Angeles, third largest city in the nation with nearly three million residents.

He told a news conference on Wednesday that he thought he could get a rapid transit system operating within his four-year term.

He also said he saw his victory as an inspiration to young people who have lost faith in the American political system.

Bradley said the system can't be changed by working from outside.

"I've been trying to say to them that I lived in the system, I believed in it, I thought it would work," he said.

Bradley is the son of a Texas sharecropper who came to Los Angeles 48 years ago seeking "a better life." He told newsmen he hopes young people disenchanted with the American way of life will look at his "humble beginnings" and see that he, too, "lived on the outside of the good life of America for so many years."

"If they are willing to persevere, to work hard enough and to prepare hard enough, it is also possible for them to dream as I have dreamed," Bradley said. A bitter name-calling campaign with racial overtones largely had overshadowed Bradley's platform calling for better police protection, an end to violence in newly integrated schools, and planning that would bring a halt to uncontrolled growth.

Perhaps the most visible problem of all is the jammed freeways that city residents must fight twice daily to get to and from work. There are more than four million vehicles in Los Angeles County.

Yorty went to bed Tuesday night without conceding the election but commenting in bitter tones, "I can only say now they're going to get what they asked for." That was an apparent reference to those who voted for Bradley.

Two Doctors Say IUDs Dangerous Contraceptive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two doctors testified Wednesday that increasingly popular intrauterine devices (IUDs) are the most dangerous type of contraceptive now in use.

They said at a House subcommittee hearing that the metal or plastic rings, springs, coils, loops, bows and spirals lack proof of either safety or effectiveness.

In Chicago, however, a spokesman for the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists defended the IUD as being both safe and effective in comparison with the alternatives.

Maj. Russel J. Thomsen, an Army gynecologist at Ft. Polk, La., said he has inserted hundreds of IUDs but now prescribes them cautiously.

He said the devices have been "proven to cause death, sterility, hemorrhage leading to anemia, disabling pain, unwanted pregnancy, miscarriage, ruptured tubal pregnancy, thousands of major surgical procedures, massive infection, blood transfusion and untold numbers of x-rays to the ovaries of young women."

He and Dr. John G. Madry, a private practitioner at Melbourne, Fla., called for tighter regulation of medical devices by the Food and Drug Administration and stronger policing of devices advertising by the Federal Trade Commission.

The FDA contends that it lacks legislative authority to require premarket safety testing of the thousands of medical devices on the market.

More than three million women in the United States and 10 million women elsewhere in the world have been fitted with IUDs, according to the FDA.

Madry said he inserted 45 of the devices before halting the practice in early 1969 because of his concern about their safety.

"The most dangerous means of contraception today is the IUD," said Madry, adding that he considers the device only slightly more effective than a douche and far less effective than oral contraceptives, diaphragms, condoms and foams.

In Chicago, Dr. Ervin E. Nichols, associate director of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, termed the testimony by the two physicians "ill considered and unsubstantiated."

Nichols said there are "superb statistical data as to the effectiveness" of the IUD. The IUD is second only to the birth control pill in effectiveness, he said.

It is true, Nichols said, that there are occasionally bleeding problems, and that there have been perforations when the IUD has been improperly applied.

"Anytime you give medicine or use a device there is an irreducible number of people who will react," Nichols said, noting that even aspirin causes a reaction in some cases.

RUNAWAYS . . . fled from family tensions.

Fight At Home Often Spur To Youth's Running Away

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of four articles on runaway young people.)

By NANCY HULVERSHORN
Star Staff Writer

It was Mother's Day one year ago when 14-year-old Lynn grabbed her purse and walked out the front door of her home. She didn't come back for three days.

By the time she returned home from that first flight Lynn had become a statistic, one of more than 400 Lincoln runaways in 1972. She had also set a pattern of habitual running which has led to psychiatric testing and long stays at the Cedars Home for Children.

"They (parents) didn't like my friends. They wouldn't let me go anywhere," said Lynn, her dark eyes flashing. Unable or unwilling to cope with home conflicts, she ran away. "I wanted to scare my parents to teach them a lesson," she said.

So It Began
And so it began for the three

'I wanted to scare my parents, to teach them a lesson.'

The three girls, clad in jeans and colorful overblouses, their long hair flowing over their shoulders, fit the pattern that emerges from the Lincoln runaway statistics.

They were 13 to 15-year-old girls, from families where tension was high, conflicts numerous. Their stated reasons for running normally involved a fight with parents, but they also had other problems at home and in school. Two of the girls had school truancy records before they began running away.

Typical Pattern
The runaway patterns also echo the typical. The flights were usually unplanned, and the girls seldom stayed away from home for more than a week, usually only a few days. Only one girl ever left the county.

While running they did the usual things. They hitchhiked, and said they found it safe. "You really meet nice people that way," said one girl.

"Yeah, nice unless . . ." they just want sex, added another. They panhandled for change. "I can get $2 in 20 minutes," one girl bragged.

They slept in apartments of older friends, but said there was no sex involved. They hid in homes of school friends or camped out in abandoned houses.

Lincolmites May Get Property Tax Break

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln property taxpayers may receive a tax break if the city's federal revenue sharing funds are funneled into capital improvement projects.

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf told the City Council at its pre-council work session Tuesday that the city should be able to reduce property taxes this year.

In an interview Wednesday, the mayor said such a reduction could be taken care of by using revenue sharing money for capital improvements, instead of using city tax dollars.

"This is a fine opportunity for the city to try and reduce property taxes," he said, adding that any reduction in taxes would not mean a reduction in services.

"We're going to make every effort to give property taxpayers a break," he said. "We're in a position to do so."

Additionally, Schwartzkopf said there could be no corresponding increase in the city's sale tax if property taxes are cut. Last year the city raised the sales tax from 1/4% to 1/2 — the legal limit allowed under state law.

Mayor Schwartzkopf's statement on lowering property taxes "came as a surprise to us," City

Pompidou, Nixon Arrive For Iceland Summit Talks

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — The presidents of the United States and France flew to Iceland Wednesday for talks intended to give new direction to their transatlantic partnership.

The French leader, Georges Pompidou, arrived first at the airport in nearby Keflavik, stepping from his plane to the strains of the French national anthem, the Marseillaise, played by a red-coated brass band from the Icelandic capital of Reykjavik.

About 90 minutes later President Nixon also touched town to a red-carpet welcome, his arrival slightly delayed by a detour for an aerial view of the destructive and still active volcano in the Westmann Islands.

Nixon smiled broadly as the Icelandic president, Kristjan Eldjarn, stepped up to greet him and the Reykjavik band struck up the American anthem.

Nixon is meeting with Pompidou beginning Thursday morning as part of his "Year of Europe," an effort to remove misunderstandings and rededicate French-American friendship.

The summit in Iceland is the last of a series of top-level meetings preparing for a presidential visit to Europe toward the end of the year. Nixon has already met in Washington with the leaders of West Germany, Britain and Italy.

While Nixon was expected to emphasize the broad principles of the Atlantic community and its goals, Pompidou will be pressing for quick action on one of its immediate flaws and problems — monetary instability.

ty. The problem was underscored by another drop in dollar prices and rise in gold prices in Wednesday's European trading.

Before they even get to their own problems, the two presidents will find themselves in the middle of their host country's conflict with Great Britain over fishing rights. That dispute was intensified only hours before arrival of the presidents by Icelandic expulsion of a British diplomat.

Iceland, which is about the size of Kentucky, is determined to extend its fishing waters from 12 to 50 miles in efforts to protect its diminishing Atlantic fishing stocks. That would bar British trawlers from grounds they have been working for more than two centuries.

The ramifications of the dispute go deeper than fishing. The

Iceland Ousts Envoy In Dispute On Fishing

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Iceland expelled British diplomat Michael Elliott on Wednesday in its dispute with London over fishing rights in the rich Atlantic waters off Iceland.

It was the first reported time that a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization has expelled a diplomat of another member country.

Chief government spokesman Hannes Jonsson announced the expulsion on grounds that Elliott had divulged secret information on the movements of Icelandic ships.

Elliott, who had arrived in Iceland over the weekend on a temporary assignment as first secretary and press officer, had discussed at a news conference the location of Icelandic ships on the basis of information published earlier by the Foreign Office in London.

Jonsson said Elliott was expelled on the basis of an Icelandic law that makes it a punishable offense for civilians and unacceptable for diplomats to give out any details on the movements of Icelandic vessels.

"Mr. Elliott has violated that law," Jonsson said.

A formal British Embassy explanation of the circumstances of Elliott's discussing ship movements failed to stop the Reykjavik government from going ahead with the expulsion. Jonsson said Elliott had three days in which to leave the country.

Asked if newsmen reporting information about Icelandic ships were also liable to prosecution, he replied, "Yes."

He also conceded that the Iceland government was aware that Elliott's information had come from London where it had already been published.

Britain is disputing Iceland's claim to control fishing within a 50-mile offshore zone. It claims Reykjavik has rights only within a 12-mile limit and has sent naval frigates to the area to back up trawlers fishing in the disputed waters.

Iceland has explained it wants to extend its territorial waters in order to preserve diminishing fishing stocks in the coastal seas which have been traditionally worked by British, German and other European fishermen.

Gold Hits New High As Dollar Weakens

LONDON (AP) — The U. S. dollar weakened in money markets across Europe on Wednesday, dropping to record lows in Paris and Frankfurt. The price of gold hit new highs.

Dealers said trading was slow in advance of the Ascension Day holiday on Thursday. With the low volume of money changing hands, there were no signs yet of the panic rush out of dollars and into gold that has touched off recent monetary crises.

Stock market prices in New York plunged in what analysts said was a response to soaring gold prices, the weakening of the dollar abroad and negative government economic indicators. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 16.70 points, closing at 922.11.

Some dealers blamed the dollar's new weakness on continued concern that the Watergate affair will weaken the Nixon administration's ability to solve U. S. economic problems. But others suggested individual factors in European countries were running the dollar down on thin volume, perhaps only for the short term.

In Frankfurt, for example, where the dollar closed at a new low of 2.7160 marks, bankers said a decision to raise West German lending rates was the prime factor. The higher rates mean investors can make more on their money by lending in Germany than they can in some other countries. So they switch out of dollars or other currencies and into marks.

As usual when confidence in the dollar was lagging, the price of gold soared. The metal jumped $5 an ounce and more in European centers to close at record highs of $114 in London and $113.25 in Zurich, the world's two largest bullion markets. Dealers suggested outspoken remarks in Rome by Guido Carli, governor of the Bank of Italy, may also affect financial markets. Carli said the official price of gold, now $42.22 an ounce, should be raised. In effect this would amount to another devaluation of the dollar, since the U. S. currency is measured in terms of gold.

Senior U. S. Treasury officials have ruled out another devaluation.

Power Shortage Woes Plague Orbiting Skylab

Houston (UPI) — New power shortage problems struck America's orbiting Skylab Wednesday, forcing major flight plan revisions and adding new emphasis to bold plans for a spacewalk to free a jammed solar cell wing and double the space station's electrical supply.

The shortage occurred after Skylab pointed its nose earthward and made man's first survey from orbit of terrestrial natural resources in a 17,114 mile per hour sweep from Utah past Mexico and Central America to Colombia.

Changing the space station's position forced it to switch from its good solar cell electrical generators to on-board batteries, because the solar cells were no longer facing the sun. Engineers said this maneuver triggered a chain of events that produced the shortage.

The problem posed no threat to the safety of Charles "Pete" Conrad, Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz. But it forced cancellation of a second earth resources survey run Thursday, and modification of plans for future attempts to perform this key experiment.

Mission Control said with the modified plans the problem would be "largely solved." But the restrictions appeared likely to reduce at least slightly the return from the surveys.

"This gives us a little more impetus, whether we do it or somebody else does it, to get that other (solar cell) panel out," Conrad told Mission Control. The astronauts had tried and failed to do this their first day in space, and wanted to try again. "We are very actively working on several alternatives that are in people's minds about solving the problem on this mission," replied capsule communicator Richard Truly. "We haven't given up yet."

Truly told Conrad that within the next two days he would probably be asked to stick Skylab's television camera out an airlock and show engineers on the ground exactly how the wing had been jammed during the May 14 launch mishap that gave Skylab both heating and power problems.

In the meantime, Truly told the crew, an entirely new flight plan for Thursday — requiring less power consumption — would be worked out during the night and passed up to the space station before breakfast time. He gave the crew a brief preliminary outline of it over the radio.

A basic aim of the new plan was to allow the batteries in Skylab to be recharged fully before they were used extensively again.

Conrad asked with concern whether Skylab would be able to conduct any more earth resources (EREP) surveys. "We will be doing more EREP, and we'll plan it so we can get the most out of it," Truly replied.

The new power problems came at the end of the first day in which the astronauts conducted experiments in all three of Skylab's major areas of research — earth resources surveys, studies of the sun, and investigations of the effect of weightlessness on the human body.

They began the day by testing themselves in a whirling chair for susceptibility to motion sickness aboard their space station. Then Conrad flashed to earth pictures from Skylab's solar observatory showing flames streaming two million miles out from the surface of the sun.

The initial earth resources survey — an attempt to help solve down-to-earth problems with information gathered 272 miles in space — came during the afternoon.

Bazooka Rounds Assassinate Sheik

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A sheik is dead and new explosions threaten the two Red Sea republics of Yemen at the troubled southwest corner of the oil-rich Arabian Peninsula.

It is not known who shot the bazooka rounds that assassinated North Yemeni Republican councilman Sheikh Mohammed Ali Othman near his home in Ta'izz early Wednesday. As a member of the three-man governing council, Othman was one of the country's most powerful men.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency said the assassins came from neighboring South Yemen. There also have been increasing reports recently about North Yemeni insurgents who oppose their government's five-month-old peace agreement with South Yemen.

Insurgents were blamed for clashes last week along the border of the two republics which left at least 30 persons dead or wounded. Othman, 63, headed a powerful tribal faction in Ta'izz, North Yemen's second largest town after the capital of San'a, and the main refugee center for political exiles from the Marxist regime in South Yemen.

He had been finance minister in North Yemen's Royalist regime, overthrown in 1962, and was appointed to the Republican council last November.

San'a radio said Othman was killed in ambush as he descended from his mountaintop home for dawn prayer. It announced three days of official mourning for the sheik.

Ta'izz is 20 miles from the South Yemen border, where war raged for three months last year between tribes and troops of the two Red Sea republics.

North Yemen claimed the Marxist government in Aden, South Yemen, had invited 70 tribal sheiks to a reconciliation conference, then slaughtered them. South Yemen claimed it was protecting itself from a "North Yemeni tribal invasion."

White House Doubts Congress Could Halt Commitment To War

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration argued Wednesday that "it is extremely doubtful" Congress could halt a President's war commitment abroad by any action except cutting off funds.

That contention was included in a White House position paper sent to the House Foreign Affairs Committee opposing its proposed bill to restrict the presidents' emergency war powers.

The committee, for the second time, failed to complete action on the bill that would put a 120-day deadline on a president's power to commit U.S. forces abroad without Congress' specific approval.

The White House paper said Congress clearly can refuse to appropriate money for a war commitment or any other policy it opposes, but added:

"It is extremely doubtful that Congress could terminate presidential authority to deploy forces as he saw fit, for example, to protect the United States against an armed attack."

The White House also argued that the 120-day deadline "could generate pressures to escalate hostilities in order to achieve objectives by whatever means available within 120 days."

Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., a supporter of the bill, said the two-page paper was prepared by the White House as suggested arguments for opponents of the bill on the committee.

Findley said he did not know who at the White House prepared the paper and a committee aide refused to give the name.

The House committee for the second time supported the 120-day deadline in the bill by rejecting 17 to 11 an amendment to strike it out.

All 11 votes against the deadline were cast by Republicans. Five Republicans joined 12 Democrats in voting for the deadline.

The committee also supported 19 to 11 the bill's provision for Congress to order a President's war commitment halted any time during the 120-days with a concurrent resolution a president cannot veto.

Gas Tax Hike Faces Rough Road

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any proposed increase in the federal gasoline tax would have rough going in Congress. Chairman Wilbur D. Mills of the House Ways and Means committee said Wednesday.

Mills, D-Ark., insisted in an interview he has no personal position on the issue, but will wait to see what, if anything, the Treasury decides to propose. Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz said Tuesday the administration is considering a gasoline tax increase.

Mills, in discussing the issue, emphasized the arguments he said would be raised against a tax hike. His committee would handle any such legislative proposals.

"It would add to the cost of almost everything," Mills said, citing the effect on airline operations, truck transportation, the use of farm tractors and workers' commuting to their jobs. "I suppose 85 per cent depend on automobiles to get to work."

Mills agreed with estimates that each one-cent-a-gallon tax increase would yield $1 billion in revenues. He said also the tax presumably could foster conservation of gasoline.

But to be effective in this regard, he said, the additional tax would have to be as high as 10 cents a gallon "and I see no chance that Congress would go for that." The present federal tax is four cents a gallon.

Mills said that if legislation for additional gasoline taxes is referred to his committee, it will be considered apart from the general tax reform bill on which the committee is scheduled to resume work in September.

"It will have to stand on its own feet," he said.

A Republican member of the committee, Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr. of New York, said in a separate interview that an economic incentive, such as a tax, might be a better way to promote energy conservation than direct measures such as limits on horsepower.

Conable suggested that an added gasoline tax, if adopted, might be imposed on a rising scale from year to year, so that the initial impact would not be too severe, but the incentive to producers and consumers to conserve fuel would remain and in-

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

Sometimes how to do something can be as controversial as deciding what to do. With the Board of Education, the subject for discussion at the moment is how to go about the appointment of a successor to resigning Mrs. Catherine Angle, rather than whom to appoint.

Silly comment of the week might be awarded board member Marvin Stewart who opposed using the general election results as a guideline to fill the vacancy on the grounds that none of the unsuccessful election candidates might want to serve with someone who has defeated them. We would rather doubt that the unsuccessful candidates are so thin-skinned.

Next in line for the silly comment award is another board member, Lou Roper, who noted that some citizens were disturbed at a newspaper suggestion that the election results be used to fill the vacancy. Their concern, he said, is that the "newspaper wants to run everything in town."

Well, this newspaper never made any such suggestion so presumably Roper and his "citizen" contacts are talking about the Lincoln Evening Journal. This newspaper doesn't want to run anything, much less everything, and any newspaper that did want to run everything would be sadly disappointed.

For one thing, no newspaper can do that and if it tried, it would soon alienate itself from its community of readers. When you talk about running things, you are presumably talking about editorial comment.

Editorials get a newspaper in hot water now and then because too many people seem not to understand their place in the scheme of things. An editorial ought to express an opinion but that is all that it is.

The opinion expressed should be one founded in some knowledge of the situation involved but it is no more sacred than the opinion of any citizen. It isn't an attempt to run things but merely an effort to promote intelligent and constructive decisions.

If the school board thinks the selection of one of the losing candidates in the last election to fill the new board vacancy is a lousy idea, then it simply should ignore that suggestion.

The suggestion isn't all that bad, although it is far from the only option open to the board. The fact that an individual runs for office does not necessarily mean he or she is the best one to appoint to any subsequent vacancy.

The board might do just as well ignoring the election and going into the community for someone who has never sought elective office. The real issue is not so much the procedure used as it is the quality of the person finally selected. If a qualified and representative individual is chosen, the board will not be severely criticized for its procedures.

Funny-action-of-the-week award goes to the City Council, for appointing a committee to work on the reduction of city committees. The recent Arthur D. Little, Inc., consulting firm report on consolidation of Lincoln and Lancaster County listed a proliferation of 58 city boards, committees and commissions.

Now there are 59. The council action, however, only seems ludicrous.

The truth is that it is quite proper to appoint a committee to reorganize city advisory and management groups. While it is at it, the committee should take a look at attendance of members of these various bodies and seek some means of eliminating those members who don't care enough about their responsibility to attend at least a solid majority of meetings.

We need not only fewer committees, but committees with dedicated members.

Prolonged Stalemate Disruptive To System

WASHINGTON — Readers sick and tired of Watergate accounts (and who isn't?) should still ponder this related question: Just how — and how effectively — is the federal government going to be run in the next three and one half years, and what might failure mean?

Merely to pose the question implies a considerable lack of faith in the political and institutional virility of the Nixon administration, and that is exactly the problem.

Granted that Mr. Nixon seems to have rallied his own psychology by grabbing the national security issue and injecting the Watergate debate with the self-assuring adrenalin of US Patriots against Them Intellectuals, Radicals and Subversives. Few Washington observers, however, think that this approach can restore his administration's efficacy and credibility.

In the meantime, can Congress leap into the breach as the source of Washington policy-making and administration? Not by any realistic yardstick. The cruel fact of technology era government is that Congress is simply a quip with the national leadership capacity. Congressional budget processes are something out of the 19th Century, and reform prospects are fading. Party discipline is stronger than it used to be, but still not strong enough to weld a disciplined policy mechanism out of old rivalries and personal satrapies. Besides which, even at the President's current low ebb, Congress cannot overcome his vetoes.

Some Congress-watchers think that this stalemate will persist through the 1974 elections, at which point, they believe, the President will either be vindicated at the polls or congressional Democrats will score big gains and take the initiative. Neither prospect really seems too likely. The Republicans are unlikely to make gains in 1974, and the White House would be hard put to trumpet small losses as a vote of confidence — even though in historical terms, such a showing might look rather good.

On the other hand, the Democrats are unlikely to make major gains simply because too many GOP incumbents are 1) personally institutionalized and 2) not remotely connected with the White House Watergate fiasco. Suppose the Democrats gained two Senate seats and 25 House seats? In historic terms, this would be just an average off-year gain.

Thus it is difficult to see how any plausible electoral verdict in 1974 is going to make much difference. So long as Mr. Nixon remains morally and politically hobbled, the political and institutional prospect is one of stalemate, conceivably through 1978. My own concern is that the system cannot stand prolonged stalemate, and that the American people will grow restive in such circumstances. If the Watergate crisis can serve as a catharsis for many changes in the system, then perhaps all will have been for the best. But alternatively, if our Washington politicians wallow in prolonged unproductivity and petty feuding, people could look for some other answer — for a "Mr. Clean," for a Man on a White Horse, for someone who manages to capitalize on frustrated public desire to send them a message.

The String Runs Out

Over the years Sam Yorty, who went to California after graduating from Lincoln High School in Nebraska's Capital City, has proven to be a durable political animal. He has run for about as many offices as Nebraska's Terry Carpenter, losing in bids for the presidency, U.S. Senate and governorship of California. He won seats in the U.S. House of Representatives, the California Assembly and was running for an unprecedented fourth term as mayor of Los Angeles.

Tuesday night Mayor Yorty's string ran out.

A black man, City Councilman Thomas Bradley, who lost to Yorty in a bitter contest four years ago, reversed the percentages in this election to become mayor of the nation's third largest city. It would be condescending to suggest that Los Angeles was "ready" for a black mayor. It is probably more true to say that the city was tired of Yorty.

As crowded and polluted as Los Angeles is, it was not badly managed under Yorty. Many of the city's problems were not of his doing and were beyond his control because of the diluted power afforded the mayor under Los Angeles' system of municipal government. Yorty was also less of a crackpot than made out to be and more shrewd and knowledgeable than his establishment detractors gave him credit for. His three previous mayoral election victories would support that contention.

But twelve years were enough and sixteen years too much, apparently, for Angelinos to take. What did him in, in addition, aside from the caricature made of him by the media, was his inclination toward racial excesses. Yorty insisted this time, as in 1969, that Bradley was linked to the Black Panthers and that if elected, Los Angeles would burn in the fires of militancy.

Bradley played it straighter on the race issue, as did former Black Panther Bobby Seale in the recent Oakland, California, city election, although Seale lost to a white incumbent who was both able and popular and who also played it straight on the race issue.

What it amounts to is that urban elites do not fear black leaders so much as they dislike being goaded into fear by white politicians who feel backed against a wall.

POW Misconduct Charged

Col. Theodore Guy reportedly was warned by the Pentagon that proving charges against fellow American POWs would be difficult. But the commander of U.S. prisoners held by the North Vietnamese went ahead anyway this week and formally accused eight enlisted men held captive with him at the "Plantation" compound outside Hanoi of collaborating with the enemy.

The charges against the five Army and three Marine POWs include conspiracy, giving information as to the activities of other prisoners and failure to obey orders.

Nothing would be more natural for a soldier who was steadfast in his duty than to want to expose those he felt aided the enemy, especially if those alleged acts contributed to cruel treatment of other American prisoners.

But we imagine that things are not always as they appear in a prison camp. What might have been mistaken as aiding the enemy could have been merely acquiescence to prison routine. And the facts, the proof, will be hard to come by. It will be one's word against another's, and someone can get unjustly hurt in the process.

Two points stand out in this. There must be more realistic standards of conduct set for American servicemen held captive in the future — ones that recognize the limits of human endurance.

And it should be recognized that some or all of those eight men accused by Col. Guy might be innocent of any misconduct and will be cruelly smeared even though the charges cannot be substantiated.

It would appear that the Pentagon's policy of allowing the issue of alleged misbehavior among the American POWs to die quietly was the wiser course.

TOM WICKER

Changing Senseless System

BOSTON — "More than a hundred years ago, we had a giant prison down South and the prisoners were called slaves. The poor whites ran it and the planters got cheap labor. Now we've got a lot of prisons just like that — low-paid white guards and blacks in the cells."

That is the view of John O. Boone, the progressive new commissioner of corrections who says he is bringing not "prison reform" but "community-based corrections" to Massachusetts. And it is that view, rather than the vague and deceptive concept of "rehabilitation," that seems to govern Boone's approach.

"I've been through my rehabilitation phase," he says of his 20-year career in the federal prison system and at the District of Columbia's Lorton Prison. Now, with many other thoughtful professionals in the field, he seems much more interested in more manageable goals — reducing the prison population, closing prison facilities, saving taxpayers' money, treating prisoners as human beings rather than as animals or slaves, using their time of indebtedness to the state more sensibly for them and the public.

Community-based corrections — getting prisoners out of institutions and back into the community, under various degrees of control — is a means to all those ends. Nobody has yet shown that it is also a means of "rehabilitating" offenders or of reducing crime significantly. In fact, nobody has shown that ANY kind of correction can do that.

Boone and others in the field nevertheless believe that the present system of incarceration is cruel, senseless, too expensive and makes the crime problem worse.

Already in Massachusetts, work-release and study-release programs at the various institutions take many inmates back to the community during the day; for instance, in one 90-day program for youthful addicts and minor offenders, 90% are in work-release programs, earning an average of $100 a week and undergoing counseling and therapy at night.

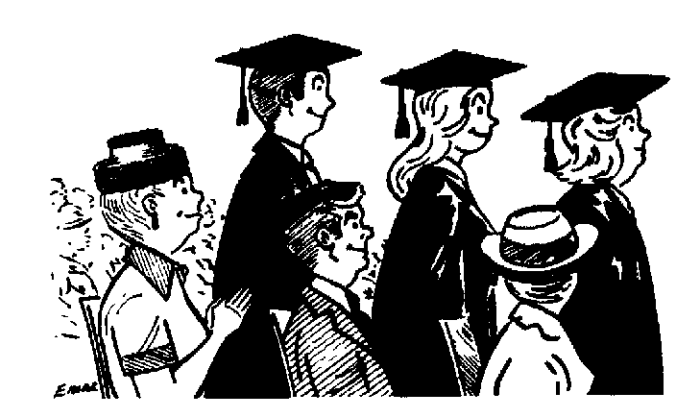

Boone and Larry Solomon, the corrections department program director, also would like to bring about a closer integration of vocational training, actual work, and work release, so that an inmate's necessary time of confinement could be put to better use. If the typical prison term is three years, Solomon believes, in most cases the first month ought to be one of interviewing, counseling, classification; and the last 18 ought to be spent on work or study release. The intervening 17 months, depending on the prisoner, could be used for job training, in prison education, productive work or whatever might be appropriate.

There is a world beyond these walls, this community, this planet, I thought, as I sat in the auditorium of a school in which I taught nine years ago. I have a stake in this class about to graduate, in this world outside the walls, I thought, for I was their third-grade teacher and had many inner riches to be shared. There were thirty-eight students at that time and teacher's aides were unheard of, but I was dealing with preferred stock and my dividends were so worthwhile, increasing in value with each passing day as I saw students grasp new knowledge.

Oh, I have had other students graduate in past years and have known the same feeling of pride that old teachers revive at graduation time but this is the first class in its entirety that I saw move slowly to stage.

Some of the young men and women had changed so much that I had to check my program to be certain I could recall the correct student.

There were so many riches we shared: the gleam in a child's eye as he learned a new word and could read a story by himself, the first soft ball that he hit into center field, the art of jumping rope without missing a beat as a chant was sung, the tears when a new pair of shoes became scuffed and the enthusiasm and quiet attention when I read "The Little House on the Prairie," by Laura Ingalls Wilder. I wondered how many band-aids I used to cover scratched knees and concluded that it was quite a number and how many times after school I dashed down the hall with a pair of mittens that had been forgotten or a nicely written paper that one was going to show Mom and Dad.

I reflected on many things and felt that I had been richly rewarded as I saw these students one by one receive their diplomas and silently wished them all peace of valleys, peace of heights.

And now one of our own, the second Blue Jeans that I used to include in my lines when he spent vacation days with us, is also to be graduated. The University of Nebraska Medical Center announced its commencement exercises so Sunday we will be Omaha-bound to share the joys of another graduate who will become a pharmacist.

A heart would have to be dead indeed that didn't beat faster at the thought of graduation. As I journey along through life, I hope I see many more graduations. Somehow they make me aware of fresh new hopes budding and young ideas replacing the old when the past gets in my eyes.

Disk, fertilize, disk, harrow, plant — over and over it goes as I hear The Farmer recount his long days in the field. Some of the farmers in this area have replanted corn since they had their first seed in the ground before the last heavy rain. A hard crust formed over the seed and the tender shoots could not get through.

I thought a few weeks ago we would never see "rain" again... at least not until well into the future. However, the upper surface of the ground is very dry and farmers are again hoping for a shower of rain. At first they did not say it very loud for visions of several inches still danced through their heads... rain day after day after day.

If the rain could be ordered, they would like a slow half-inch or inch of rain followed the next day by clearing weather. Then they could get back into the fields again for further planting while the grain already planted could begin to sprout.

Until the rain appears in the forecast again, farmers will have to wait just as they had to wait for the rains to stop before they could begin their spring seeding. Come to think of it, a farmer does a lot of waiting during a growing season. Between the waiting period, he does much wishful thinking.

Last Refuge

Lincoln, Neb.
We know from various instances in the past that Mr. Nixon's legal education seems to have left some important items unclear to him.

His literary education seems also to have been a bit deficient. Had it not been so, he could hardly have risked defending the egregious burglaries in the Ellsberg and Watergate cases on the grounds of "national security." He might have been wiser to remember what is perhaps the most famous single remark of Dr. Samuel Johnson (7 April 1775): "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel."

Cuban Friendship

Bloomfield, Neb.
Today's news has given me a hint as to why our government has consistently refused permission for our town to befriend some small Cuban town for the purpose of encouraging mutual understanding and good will.

Bernard L. Barker, an ex-Cuban, testified that he and three other ex-Cubans broke into the Watergate hoping to find evidence that would help in the overthrow of the Castro government. Many of us have known of our President's influential ex-Cuban friends, still anxious for the overthrow of the government of Mr. Castro.

America does not need nor want another Bay of Pigs nor another Vietnam. Our ex-Cuban citizens and other Americans will profit most from a policy of genuine concern for the welfare of the Cuban people still remaining in their native land. Such a policy would be mutually beneficial to all concerned. And entirely consistent with that of befriending China and Russia.

Let's urge our government to treat Cuba as we would wish to be treated if we were ever in their position. Counter-revolution is not the answer. A letter to our representatives in Washington could help.

Indian's Place

Lincoln, Neb.
We have heard senators and the American public express content over the end of the siege at Wounded Knee. Public opinion is now centered on the Watergate scandal. Nixon no doubt must feel very embarrassed; he hasn't made any personal or public appearances lately.

It is not my intent to find fault with a man who has won my admiration and previous vote. I did so only for his trip to China and opening closed doors with that country.

Deterioration in a state should prove to the American people that a government that flounders under its own decay is irresponsible and unworthy of jurisdiction over the American Indian. It should also serve to testify to our own Indian people that it has willingly faltered and violated without limit the sanctity of the task entrusted to it. It has abused the sacred trust against its duty and commitments to the first Americans. It shows that its power or right to govern has been found wanting, corrupt and unfit to exercise political authority over the Indian people.

No more than our Indian people can be led by riff-raff and scoundrels will the American people be forced to succumb to the misconduct of its leaders. The Indian in spite of all else is expected to give his allegiance to that same government which in the past sought only their ruin and destruction. We are to remain under the dishonor of this irony to which my forebears were subject. On that account, I defy any person, red or white, to come forth and give some reason why the Indian is not to be an entity upon his homeland. I should like to see established in the future affairs of its policy-making, in the southern Dakotas, a sovereign state of Indian autonomy.

My people have witnessed the rise; perhaps they will yet see its unwelcome downfall. The doctrine of manifest destiny on red soil seems to shiver and quake under its own falsehood and deceptions. While opinion is indeed viewed, analyzed, and concluded from the whites' point of thought, yet in the mind of the red man, the charade is deliriously ridiculous.

Damaged Car

Lincoln, Neb.
On May 20, Whittier Junior High School celebrated its 50th anniversary with open house, which we attended. It was a very pleasurable afternoon and many old acquaintances were renewed. My husband had attended the old school, and the new Whittier for one year.

However, when we left the gathering, our afternoon was ruined, as someone had deliberately scratched a deep cut across the trunk of our car with a very sharp knife or other instrument. The car next to us had been damaged in the same manner.

Later, we learned that this sort of thing happens frequently. If so, when the school was inviting former students and teachers to attend open house, why was there not a guard on duty to protect us from such an occurrence? We were very upset, and surely would never attend another gathering there under any circumstances.

Perhaps this is a little thing compared to recent happenings in our country, but it was very disturbing to us and to the owners of the car next to us.

IRATE

Pollution Source

Lincoln, Neb.
Every day we read in the papers and on TV about pollution. My idea of a way to help stop pollution is being disregarded by the young generation of reporters because I believe they are opposed. Here it is:

These hot-rod cars and motorcycles all have special mufflers and most use cheap gas. Just watch them take off. Full charge and all the smoke pouring out of the muffler. Same on streets or highways. Surely this adds to pollution.

Now, if they would force them to put on regular mufflers, they could eliminate a lot of pollution. Just think over the whole country of how many cars and motorcycles there are with these special smoky mufflers. Let's stop this smoke and noise.

Son Refuses To Return Money

By ROBERT PETERSON
QUESTION: — "My dad, 71, did a crazy thing. After Mom passed on he married a girl half his age. They didn't hit it off and he could see a divorce in the offing. So he went to us three children and divided up his considerable holdings and gave each of us one-third and even paid the gift taxes, so that he'd be legally broke when the divorce came. There was an understanding that afterwards we'd give the money back to him. The divorce came about and since he was broke Dad got off practically scot free so far as alimony was concerned. Afterwards my sister and I promptly gave Dad back his money, but our brother John refuses. He says since it was legally given to him and since he needs it, he's not giving anything back. Dad is spitting mad, but what can he do?"

ANSWER: — Probably very little. There have been several cases like this in the courts and in most cases judges have found that items legally given as a gift are in permanent possession of the recipient, unless there's a signed agreement that they will be returned. Maybe your dad deserves a setback for trying to outsmart the courts. Divorce proceedings and alimony requirements need overhauling, but your dad's tricky maneuvering was sure to get him into trouble.

Moyer To Head Safety Council

The Nebraska Safety Council has announced that Cliff Moyer, safety supervisor for Northwestern Bell Telephone Company of Omaha, has been elected by the board of directors to serve as president of the council for 1973-74. He succeeds Loren L. Andrews of Lincoln who served in the position for the past two years.

Stuart Maseman of Lincoln and Dr. Kenneth F. Kimball of Kearney were elected vice presidents and Jack Moors of Lincoln was named treasurer. Thomas L. Carroll, the executive director of the council, serves as secretary.

The officers and immediate past president will serve as the executive committee, along with two directors named by the president. Those designated were Jack Stiles and W. E. Mickelson of Lincoln.

The board of directors consists of 24 persons elected by the members at the annual meeting.

ANSWER: — Glad to hear it. Many believe dogs are incapable of understanding and appreciating those who have rendered them some special service. Your story is a reminder that some dogs indeed have the capacity for gratitude.

QUESTION: — "I'm a real estate salesman, 55. I've been with the same firm a quarter-century and have always lived here. But every now and then I get so bored with everything, including my co-workers, the climate, and the work routines that I want to sell my house, take my savings of $10,000, and hop in the car with my wife and move to a brand new community somewhere. Is this realistic?"

ANSWER: — Maybe that's what you need. Some vocational specialists claim everyone should change vocations and locations every 20 years or so, simply to avoid getting bored and complacent. As a real estate salesman you've got an occupation you can play just about anywhere. However, rather than sell your home and cut your local ties impetuously, it might be preferable to take a leave of absence without pay so you can get fully acquainted with some new area. Many of us get momentarily overcome by boredom and are tempted to do foolish things, such as leaving good jobs and nice communities which mean a great deal to us. Some adjust and are glad they made the change. But others wish they had stayed put.

Mother Suggested Girl Run Away

"I used to argue with my Mom all the time," said Jody, as she sat in the living room of her foster home. "One day she told me to leave. I did. For more than a week I stayed at a friend's house. Her Dad didn't really notice I was there."
Jody and her family often fought about her black friends. And that wasn't the first time her Mom had said, "I hate you, why don't you leave," according to Jody. It wasn't even the first time she had left. It was merely the longest and the one that brought her in contact with the authorities.

"I didn't call it running away. I didn't call it anything," explained Jody, her blue eyes framed in light blue eyeshadow.
Cars, Closets
Since that 10-day episode Jody has run half a dozen times. She has slept in a bedroom closet of a friend. She has lived in abandoned cars and houses and eaten canned food supplied by friends. She has always stayed around Lincoln.
Though there was some excitement and adventure in being independent for a few days, two of the girls admitted that they did have bad experiences while running.

"Almost every time something bad happened," said 14-year-old Jody. One time she was jumped and beaten by some girls. Another time her coat got stuck in the chains of a motorcycle. She was thrown from the bike and almost hit by a truck.
"It wasn't like what I thought it would be, but it was fun in a way," said Lynn. She had problems only once. "This guy was shooting up tequila. He wanted me to tie the thing on his arm (tourniquet). I didn't want to do it and I didn't want to tie it. He got me against the wall with a knife and said he was going to cut my jugular vein.

Only Marty, a very independent girl, who had stayed away from home three weeks and felt she could have made it longer, said she had not had any bad experiences.
Don't Advise It
None of the three advises other teenagers to run away. "I always thought it was stupid when other kids ran away," admitted Lynn. Now she tells her friends to stick it out at home.

"It doesn't make you a hot shot," added Marty. "You do it cause you want to, not cause you think it will make you neat."
The three girls have analyzed their behavior to some extent and can verbalize some of the reasons and problems behind their habitual run-away attempts.
"I was sick of home. I wanted to change my life," said Marty, pushing back her straight brown hair. "I just wanted to be on my own, but I'm too young. So how else are you going to do it, but run away."
The teenagers ran for attention, to get parents "to show me they care."
"When there is no one to talk to then I want to run away—to get attention, so I'll have someone to talk to," said Lynn.

all come back at once," said Lynn. She talks of her conflicts with her Dad and of missing her Mom. "I worry about her; she's not strong."
However long they run, the three must eventually return to the problems they were fleeing. They return to people who will listen and try to help—probation officers, volunteer big sisters, a special runaway rap group. But they have yet to conquer the problems with him, with self.
It was a dreary, wet day outside as two of the girls sat on a couch, smoking forbidden cigarettes and talking of running and problems at home.
"I almost ran away today. I didn't want to go to school," one girl admitted. "Sometimes I just feel like killing myself. Sometimes I do."
And the other quietly added, "Sometimes I do too."

Trying To Escape
They also realize that their running usually involves trying to escape some unsolved problems.
"When things just get down on you, you just like to take a short vacation," explained Marty. While she is running her problems go away. "I don't think about them."
But for Lynn running away is not really an escape, even temporary. "When I have a lot of problems I run away. But they

4 Nations Will Trade Ocean Data

London Financial Times — UPI
London — Britain, the United States, Canada and West Germany have launched a scheme for the exchange of scientific data concerning the state of the ocean in the same way as they handle weather reports.

The information is flashed from ship to shore and thence to a processing station, fast enough for use in forecasting sea conditions for fishermen, wave heights for shipping and the likely effect of the sea on the atmosphere for meteorologists.

Many other countries are expected soon to join the project, which is eventually to be extended to embrace a worldwide scheme for the monitoring of ocean pollution. The four-nation pilot project is one of the first steps in building the Integrated Global Ocean Stations System (IGOSS) that is being launched jointly by the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission and the World Meteorological Organization. IGOS is intended to become the oceanographic equivalent of the World Weather Watch.

The pilot project is making use of the Global Telecommunications System set up by the World Weather Watch for the distribution of data. Information is being gathered by merchant ships, Coast Guard cutters and fishing vessels as well as scientific research ships. Lightships and weather ships stationed in the North Atlantic are also important sources of data.

Each country takes all the data, gathered by the others and applies them to its own special interests. The United States and Canada, for example, are producing charts of sea temperatures and waves for the North Atlantic. The scope of the project is soon to be extended to include Iceland, Norway and the Soviet Union as well as Japan, with nearly 20 more nations expected to join later.

Four features of the ocean are being studied in the pilot project. These are the sea surface temperature, the thickness of the surface layer (down to the first sharp temperature break where the ocean's warm "lid" ends), the temperature at a depth of 200 meters and temperature adjacent to the sea floor.

The thickness of the warm surface layer is of particular importance to fishermen because of the effect of temperature of fish movements.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Thursday

Don't you like Cancer? Please let us hear more about your feelings. —Elizabeth Garrett, Washington D.C. Response: More persons in "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" are born under Cancer than any other zodiacal sign. Cancer harmonizes with Scorpio, Pisces, Taurus and Virgo. Cancer is drawn to Capricorn but the relationship poses a challenge. Natives of Cancer should exercise caution in dealings with Libra and Aries. I do like Cancer. Meru Griffin who has brought me and astrology to millions of persons is a Cancer. Della Reese a fan and reader of mine is a Cancer. Art Linkletter who grudgingly admits I am right about him, is born under Cancer. Many under this zodiacal sign will change residence this year. Many others will earn more money in November. Cancer is the warm, sensitive, even passionate. A few of the best chefs in the world are Cancerians.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) What appears a major obstacle to immediate plans is due to evaporate. Know it and proceed accordingly. Be flexible. Highlight versatility. Have alternatives available. Sagittarius is in picture. Special call or message is featured.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Money situation could be deceptive. Realize it and study fine print. Read between the lines. Protect yourself in clinches. Someone is a ringer for you. At you. Return to a wrap something of value for a money priority.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Accent is on fear of illness connected with marriage. Be analytical. Get facts as they exist not merely as you wish things could be. Virgo person might figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) August may suggest a new indication. Key is to tolerate the foibles of family member. Don't point accusing finger. You gain most through diplomatic approach. Avoid self-prescriptions. Keep medical appointments.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Friends may be well-meaning but misinformed. Obtain hint from Gemini message. See persons. Situations in light of reality. Pisces is in picture. Refine techniques. Romance could be temporarily stymied.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You achieve and advance. You handle responsibility admirably. One who attempts to downgrade you will be rebuffed. Proceed with confidence, not arrogance. Older individual is lending support in unobtrusive manner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Finish rather than begin round out and complete project. Obtain overall view. Ignore in individual who snipes. Complaints, sings blues. Your potential is greater than you might imagine. Now you are due to get in king of how far you can go.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) One who performs services may act unusual manner. Key is to understand without being weak—be interested but don't get tied in complicated tangle. Emphasis is on work, health, new ways to move toward goal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Maintain low profile. Means don't push or be too obvious. If discreet you learn. Otherwise you could step into a embarrassing situation. Legal affairs need review. The same applies to partnership and to special relationships.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Move beyond recent limitations. Break barriers which block progress. You could inadvertently obtain privileged information. Sagittarius may be in picture. Be cooperative. But also know that you have right to live your own life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Friend may be overly enthusiastic. Romance is fine but so are facts—go after the latter. Check thoroughly before committing yourself to definite course. Leo, Scorpio persons may be in picture. Review spending program.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Do some additional reading. You gain if perceptively. One in habit of making promises should be made to provide backup information. Message will become crystal clear. Gemini, Virgo and Taurus persons could be involved.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY the month of June should be of special importance. You will be assuming more responsibility making more money and if on vacation, the romance angle is emphasized. You are direct, honest, inquisitive. You are not easy to understand but many would be unhappy without you. You draw to you numerous persons born under Leo and Aquarius.

'Fields Of Peace'—Pennsylvania Germans

There are places where the passage of time seems not to matter: where clocks and calendars—man's gadgets—are oddly out of place. Minutes, days are inconsequential. The rhythm of life is more closely tuned to the eternal recurrence of the seasons. Summer, fall, winter, spring. From end back to beginning. Today, like yesterday, not much different from tomorrow.

Such places have nothing to do with cities, where lives are ordered by The Schedule. Rather it is the land. The land endures, and there is the feeling that, insofar as an individual derives his living directly from the earth, he partakes in a kind of immortality.

Author, Millen Brand and photographer, George A. Tice have, graphically and lyrically, captured the essence of one of these timeless areas in their recently-published paperback volume, "Fields Of Peace" (E. P. Dutton & Co., Inc.). The combined efforts of the two men, both of whom have received previous recognition in their respective fields, have resulted in an immensely enjoyable book about the rural Pennsylvania Germans and the land which they inhabit.

In his text, author Brand touches briefly upon the history, the religion and the lifestyle of his subjects who are usually—and erroneously—referred to as "Pennsylvania Dutch."

Fleeing Germany many generations ago because of war and religious persecution, a number of "plain sect" groups settled in the colony established by William Penn. Anabaptist (i.e. believing in non-infant baptism) in orientation, the most predominant of these groups were the Amish and the Mennonites.

Some 250 years after the initial emigration, these people still adhere to a rigid lifestyle circumscribed by the dictates of religion and tradition. Especially among the more orthodox Amish, the Old Way still persists.

It is reflected in their clothing; their non-acceptance of modern conveniences such as automobiles and electric appliances; their refusal to go to war; their educational and religious practices. "Over the plain sects . . . lies the Anabaptist heritage . . . of going away from the majority back to full acceptance of the teachings of Christ. Such acceptance is not lip service. It is living service. It affects all their life."

And if the agrarian lives led by these people, whom Brand describes as "so eminently loving and orderly," is somewhat plain, it is not without its own, singular appeal. Speaking of an Amish home, the author says, "The poverty of the environment enhances its functional design, leaving it visible. Pure."

Above all, one gets the feeling of community, of co-operation within and between families that indeed seems almost anachronistic. Parents and children worship together and work together in the fields ("I've seen a barefoot boy plowing with six horses . . ."); and there is an overriding sense of mutual responsibility within the community at large.

Tice's photographs—over 150 of them—are done with a sensitivity and grace befitting the subject matter. With the eye of an artist, he has captured the essence of the region and its people. There is, appropriately, nothing superfluous, nothing sentimental about his work; and his remarkably clean and powerful portraits greatly enhance the total effect of the book.

"Fields Of Peace" provides the reader with a refreshing spiritual journey into an area where past, present and future overlap in a most uncommon way. Moreover, it deserves perhaps the highest compliment that can be paid a book of this type—it makes you want to be there.

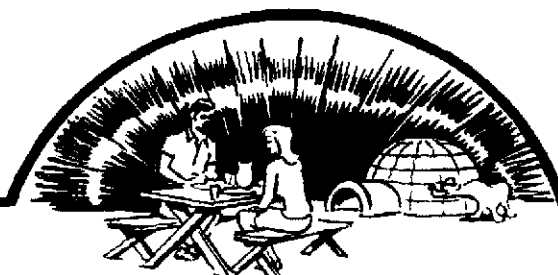

CATCHING UP . . . on the news.

Washington — A coalition of 25 national organizations — not all of them exclusively women's groups — is working out a master plan aimed at achieving ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment to the constitution by 1975.

The amendment would ban all forms of discrimination based on sex by any governmental unit anywhere in the nation.

Ratification this year is impossible because only two state legislatures that have not yet acted on the amendment are still in session and at least eight more ratifications are needed to reach the required 38.

The outlook for ratification next year is almost as dim.

Thirteen states that have not ratified have regular legislative sessions scheduled in 1974, but 11 of these are states that rejected the amendment this year and the legislatures that meet next year will be the same ones that voted down the amendment this year.

Only Virginia, among the states where the amendment has been defeated, has a legislative election this year.

Some of the member organizations of the new "E.R.A. Ratification Council" will work toward getting more states to ratify in 1974.

But the bulk of the effort will be directed toward the election, next year, of legislators favorable to E.R.A. and to being prepared with the arguments and the lobbying techniques that will succeed when the newly elected legislatures convene in 1975.

While the details of which organization will do what have not been worked out, the E.R.A. ratification council is making an effort to split up the various tasks to avoid duplication and to let each organization do what it can do best.

Among the basic assignments worked out so far by the council, which is a rather informal consultative group, are:

—The National Women's Political Caucus will attempt to identify, in the 20 non-ratifying states, the anti-E.R.A. legislators who look defeatable and to find candidates to run against them.

—The National Organization For Women (NOW) plans to analyze the records and the political and economic alliances of every anti-E.R.A. legislator to determine which individuals or groups might bring pressure on these opponents to change their mind. NOW will also see that the issue of the Equal Rights Amendment is raised every time any legislative candidate appears at a public meeting.

—Common Cause plans to analyze the arguments that had been raised against the amendment and to prepare answers. It also plans to assist in training grassroots lobbyists for E.R.A.

The League Of Women voters will also do some technique-training for lobbying and analysis of the issues. But it may concentrate its effort on arousing support for the amendment among women in areas away from large urban centers. The league is relatively much stronger than the other national women's organizations in such places.

The many other groups that are part of the E.R.A. ratification council range from the United Auto Workers to a dozen different organizations of women of various religious denominations to the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and the National Women's Party.

The ratification effort is expected to continue to receive some help from at least two members of the Nixon administration, Anne Armstrong, counselor to the President, and Mrs. Armstrong's special assistant for women's affairs, Jill Ruckelshaus. Both women support the Equal Rights Amendment and Mrs. Ruckelshaus, in particular, has been active in a variety of feminist causes. President Nixon endorsed the E.R.A. last year, though without much attempt to gain publicity for the endorsement.

Marilyn Sue Boelter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Boelter of Inman, and Walter Fick Jr., son of Walter Fick Sr. of Inman, exchanged wedding vows during a 2 p.m. ceremony May 27 at the Christ Lutheran Church.

Miss Debra Fick of Inman was maid of honor. Other attendants were Miss Gloria Shaw of Orchard and Mrs. Greg Reeson.

Edward Fick of Inman served as best man and groomsmen were Gary Fick of Ithaca, N.Y., and Robert Boelter of Inman. Ushers were Jim Fick of Inman and Tim Dugan of O'Neill.

The bride graduated from the Lincoln School of Commerce and is employed as a secretary for the Havelock Bank in Lincoln.

The bridegroom, a recent University of Nebraska graduate, will begin graduate studies in range physiology. He is affiliated with Alpha Zeta-Phi Eta Sigma and Gamma Sigma Delta honoraries.

The couple will live at 6114 Havelock Ave. in Lincoln.

Limit Mealtime Hassles

DEAR ABBY: I am now a grown man, but when I was a child my parents never forced me to eat anything I didn't like, and I never suffered from it. I now tend to follow that approach with my own children. I have divorced and remarried, and my present wife and I have my children from my previous marriage for many weekends and most of the summer.

We get along fine, except at mealtime. My wife feels that children should be made to eat food they don't like, on the theory that it is good for them, and they will grow to like it. The children have made an honest effort to try certain foods which don't appeal to them, but they simply don't like certain things. My wife tends to prepare at least one thing at every meal that the children don't like, and it is a constant hassle at mealtime.

We have agreed to let you arbitrate and will abide by your decision.

authority over them. That's not fair.

DEAR ABBY: I've been putting this off for so many years I am ashamed of myself, but now I must do something about it.

When I was very young I had an illegitimate daughter. When she was 2, I married a fine man, and we had three children of our own. All four children think my husband is their father.

My husband never legally adopted my first child. She just used his last name, and it has gone on like that ever since.

This first daughter is now 44 years old, and one day in order to get old age benefits she will have to have a birth certificate. I seem to recall that when she was an infant I destroyed it for fear she (or someone else) would find it.

I don't want her to know the circumstances of her birth, but I think I am cornered. Can you help me? TROUBLED MIND

DEAR TROUBLED: The laws vary in different states. Talk to a lawyer. He may be able to help you get another birth certificate without disclosing the facts. It's worth a try.

DEAR ABBY: You advised someone to "go the 70x7 route," and no one in our office can figure out what you meant. Please clarify.

DEAR STUMPED: I meant that however many times — 7, or 70x7 — someone trespasses against you, if he asks forgiveness, forgive him. (New Testament: Matthew, XVI-11, 21-22.)

Commission Plans First Reunion

The Governor's Commission on the Status of Women, organized in 1964 with the expressed purpose of bringing together Nebraska women from varied backgrounds and organizations to share information about what women are doing and to emphasize voluntarism and the retraining of women," will have its first reunion Saturday at the Kellogg Center.

Following the double theme of "Women of Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow" and "The Woman Who Cares," the reunion of more than 175 past members and the 31 current commissioners will follow a brief business meeting at 9:30 p.m.

Highlighting the event, scheduled between the hours of 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., will be former State Senator Florence Reynolds of Omaha, who will discuss "The Women of Yesterday"; Dr. M. Anne Campbell, University of Nebraska director of public affairs, whose topic will be "The Women of Today"; and Jan Rasmussen of Hooper, whose address will be "Tomorrow's Women. The speakers all are past or present commission members.

According to Mrs. Virginia

Portsch, chairwoman, the commission's primary emphases this year have been the formation of an alumnae group, which, hopefully, will be a result of the Saturday reunion; support of the Equal Rights Amendment, eventually rescinded by the Nebraska Unicameral; and the formation of a talent bank of women to potentially serve in any state position or provide resource material sought by the governor.

Mrs. Portsch, who "feels that the commission has had a great impact on women's status in the state," will represent the state organization at the Interstate Commission's convention to be held in Philadelphia, Pa., in mid-June.

Other commission delegates at the meetings will be B. J. Keller, chairwoman of women under the law and Mrs. Venette Creager, a former officer, who serves on the interstate body. Mrs. Donna Polk will represent the State Department of Labor at the convention.

Opening lead - seven of diamonds.

To defend well is partly a matter of diagnosing how the unseen cards are divided and partly a matter of then determining how to take advantage of your diagnosis.

Assume you're West and lead a diamond. East wins with the ace, South contributing the four, and returns the nine - on which South plays the queen.

If you win with the king and start to think of what to do next, you are wasting your time - because declarer has ten tricks coming his way, whatever you do.

But if you pause to analyze the probable diamond holding when declarer plays the queen on East's nine at trick two, you are sure to reach the conclusion that East started with the A-9-6 and South with the Q-J-4-2. You therefore play the three of diamonds on the queen and eventually put the contract down one.

The bidding tells you that South cannot have five diamonds - and in any case you cannot assume it, for that would certainly render the contract indefensible. Nor can South have three diamonds, because that would mean East had four untrump cards and he would have returned his original fourth best diamond in that case.

It follows that South must have exactly four diamonds, that East started with the A-9-6, and that ducking the queen is undeniably the right play.

Of course, South could have fixed your wagon beyond repair had he ducked the second diamond instead of putting in the queen, but that is a play he will have loads of time to rue if you meet your obligation in full by ducking the queen when South plays it. Worrying about your opponent's errors is his problem, not yours.

CRASH HELMET . . . and fire-proof suit protect driver of a rail.

The Call Can Be Irresistible

By IVAN TRAVNICEK
Star Staff Writer

The roar of the drag races provides an enervating and irresistible call to the drag strip to hundreds of spectators throughout the summer.

Sanctioned by the National Hotrod Association (NHA), the drag strip located near Millard draws car owners operating everything from rails suitable only for running the quarter mile to practically anything off the street that can still move under its own power.

Some of the vehicles are specially modified so that their weight distribution is such that when they accelerate rapidly they will do a "wheelie."

Doing a "wheelie" is traveling on only the two rear wheels of a car. Casters are mounted at the rear of such a vehicle to keep it from flopping over on its back.

The route a "rail" would follow to the finish line is a lot longer than a quarter mile. The real route begins back in the shop, months before a race.

Building a "rail" is a hobby, and an expensive one at that. A rail is nothing more than a supercharged racing engine fastened to the lightest frame that will support it, which in turn has two gigantic racing "slicks" in rear and two "bicycle" wheels in front.

So a rail bears only the slightest resemblance to dad's four-door sedan. A rail's engine is so "souped up" that it can be kept running for only a few seconds at a time.

Once a rail is built, it is loaded on a trailer and pulled behind a passenger car or pickup truck to the race track.

At the race final tuning is done to the engine and the driver clothes himself in a fireproof suit and crash helmet.

Then it's off to the access road leading to the track.

Once on the line, "Christmas tree" lights, the top ones yellow, the next to the bottom one green and the "go" light red, begin to flash at one-second intervals toward the instant of blastoff.

A better word than blastoff could not be found to describe the start of a quarter-mile race.

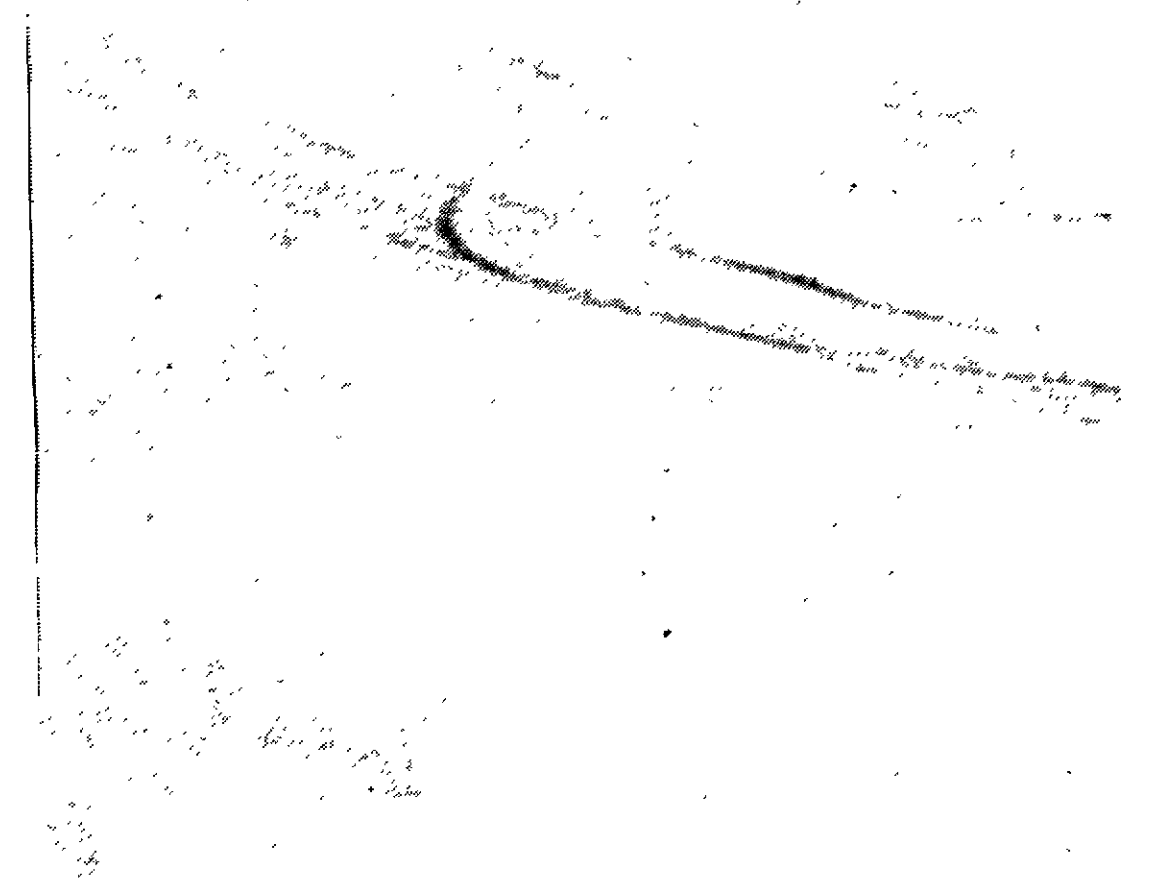

With an ear-splitting roar, the rail rockets down the quarter mile track under such fierce acceleration that the vehicle can reach 245 miles an hour in national competition in under 7 seconds.

Parachutes are then used to slow the rail and keep it from coasting off over the horizon.

Electric eyes are used to start and stop the timing clocks the moment the starting and finishing lines are crossed.

So if you want an expensive hobby, build yourself a rail.

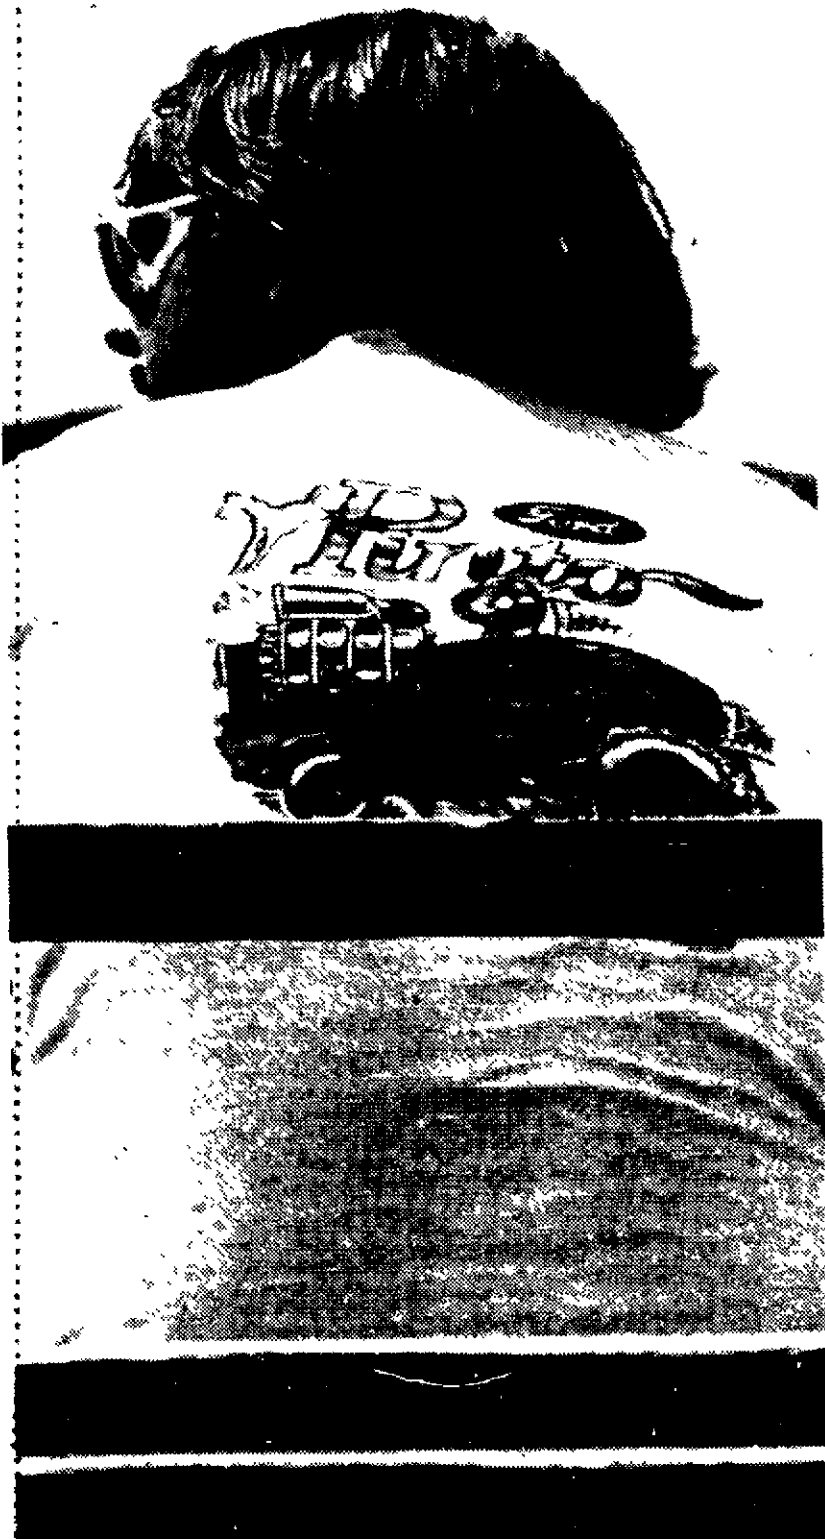

If you want excitement, take it "down to the drags" and try to break the 200 mile an hour barrier without losing control and landing in a ditch.

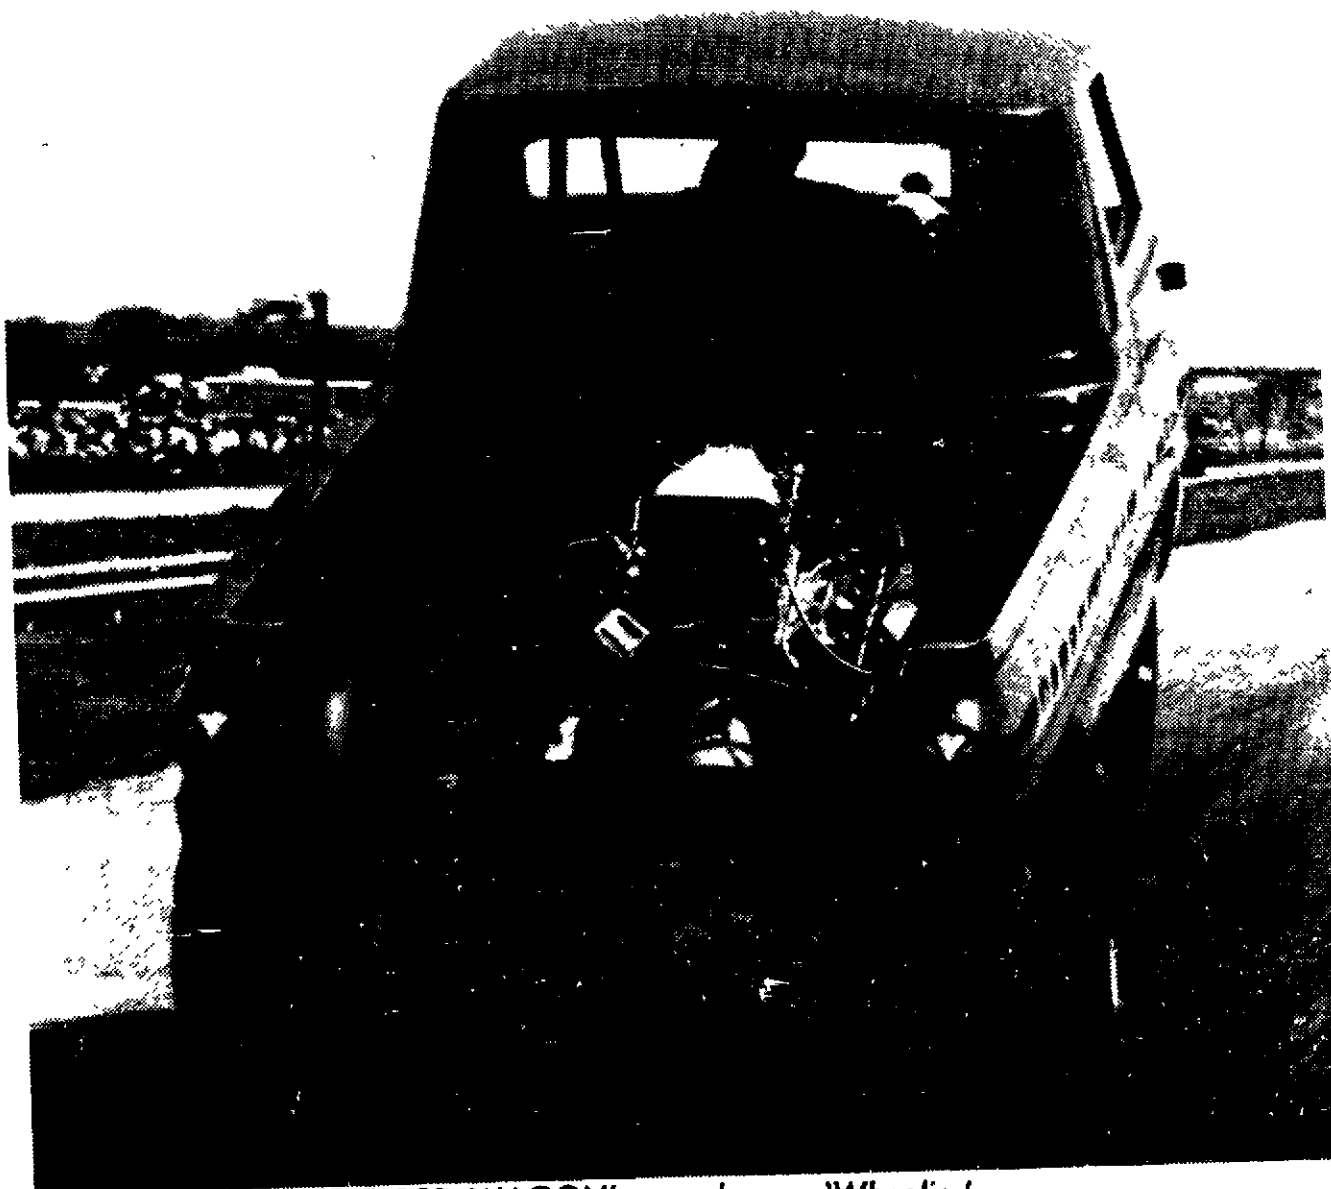

'RAIL' . . . rockets down the strip.

30 seconds isn't enough.

At a time when people are demanding more informative advertising, television commercials are getting shorter.

The trend is to 30 second spots. Or time for about 50 words.

That's not enough to tell everything consumers want to know these days: prices, colors, guarantees, where to find it, what it's made of, and so much more.

Instead, advertise where you can tell a complete story without being a "fast talker."

In newspapers.

In newspapers you can give the full details—in 30 seconds the average reader can absorb 250 words, or 5 times as much information as from TV.

And newspapers let a consumer pause to evaluate, re-read, and even clip your ad as a reminder.

Newspapers have always been the hardest working advertising medium.

And we think their future looks better than ever.

Damages Sought In Accident

A Lincoln man has filed a $54,240 suit in Lancaster District Court in connection with the 1971 death of his five-year-old son which allegedly resulted from injuries received in a bicycle-car mishap.

Dwight L. Johnson, father and administrator of the estate of Scott Johnson, names Harold D. Taylor and Larry G. and JoAnn Stonacek as defendants in the action.

Johnson alleges that on June 8, 1971, his five-year-old son was taken to the home of the Stonaceks at special instructions and request of the defendants to play with the Stonacek children.

He alleges that his son was familiar with operation of a bicycle with training wheels but was not experienced in riding other types of bicycles particularly those equipped with hand-brakes.

The plaintiff alleges that through the negligence of the Stonaceks in not properly supervising the children his son was permitted to ride bicycles including a 10-speed bicycle in the street at 35th and South where he was struck by a car driven by Taylor.

The plaintiff alleges that the impact caused the child to be thrown from the bicycle resulting in injuries which caused his death.

He alleges negligence on the part of Taylor in failing to have his vehicle in proper control, in failure to maintain proper lookout, in failing to slow in his approach to an intersection, in failing to yield the right-of-way and in failing to decrease his speed.

The petitioner charges the Stonaceks with negligence in failing to supervise and control the acts of the children and prevent the Johnson child from going into a public street without supervision, in failing to warn against the dangers of riding a bicycle in the street and in placing the child in access to a bicycle when they knew he was not qualified or capable of riding such a bicycle.

Court Order Blocks Sale For Taxes

Lancaster District Judge Samuel Van Pelt has issued an order restraining Lancaster County Sheriff Merle Karnopp from holding a sale May 30 of certain property allegedly owned by Westinghouse Credit Corp. and not the House of Furniture of Lincoln.

Westinghouse Credit Corp., in a suit filed in Lancaster District Court, alleges that it placed property in trust with the House of Furniture which on May 10 was replevied by creditors.

According to the petition, the sheriff levied a distress warrant for failure to pay back taxes by House of Furniture wholly against property belonging to Westinghouse when other property of House of Furniture was available.

Westinghouse claims that levying solely against property owned by the plaintiff instead of the House of Furniture is unfair, unjust, inequitable and illegal, and that the sheriff should be restrained and enjoined from selling such property at a public sale.

Judge Van Pelt set June 8 for hearing on the temporary injunction.

Suit Filed In Mishap

A $102,500 suit has been filed in Lancaster District Court against Randall Eugene Munkers in connection with a truck-car accident in which the passenger in the defendant's truck sustained injuries.

Howard L. Vaughn, father of Connie Lee Vaughn, alleges that on Aug. 8, 1972, his daughter was an invited passenger in a truck driven by Munkers when the Munkers vehicle struck a parked car at 17th and Benton.

The plaintiff alleges that the defendant was negligent in that he failed to maintain proper lookout, proper control of his vehicle, was driving on the left hand side of the street, was talking to persons in the box of the truck while driving and was traveling at excessive speed.

As a result of the mishap, the plaintiff claims his daughter received ragged and disfiguring lacerations to her forehead, cheek, eyebrow and nose.

Cottonmill Recreation Project Near Kearney Wins Approval

Kearney, Neb. (AP) — Funding has been approved for the development of the Cottonmill Lake Recreation Area northwest of Kearney. It will be deeded to the city of Kearney and Buffalo County by the state next Jan. 1. Word was received Wednesday from the State Game and Parks Commission that the $143,000 project has received state approval.

The state will provide 25 per cent of the cost, 25 per cent will come from the city and county, and the remaining 50 per cent will be covered with federal funds from the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

Federal approval has not yet been received, according to Del Whiteley, federal aid chief with the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

He said he does not expect federal approval for fiscal 1974 due to a 75 per cent cutback in allocated funds to Nebraska under the Land and Water Conservation Act. However, he expects these funds to be restored by 1975.

Whiteley said despite possible non-funding on the federal level, Nebraska has enough carryover in federal funds to cover the cost of the project and he anticipates full funding of the project for fiscal 1974.

At the same time approval was given the Cottonmill project, another Kearney project — for a new municipal swimming pool in south Kearney — was deferred by the state. Whiteley said the project may be approved later.

Also approved by the state, Whiteley said, was a project at Shelton in Buffalo County estimated to cost $147,200. It will include acquisition of additional park land and replacement of the community's swimming pool.

Judge Upholds Order Requiring 2nd Fire Exit

An order issued in February, 1972, by the Lincoln Bureau of Fire Inspections against Halco, Inc. has been declared proper and in accordance with the authority vested in the bureau by the City of Lincoln.

Lancaster District Judge William Hastings Wednesday handed down the order in an action brought by Halco, challenging the validity of the order issued in connection with an apartment house it owns at 1742 K.

Hastings held in his ruling that the order issued by the fire inspections bureau to make certain improvements on Halco's property to bring the property into compliance with city ordinances was properly issued and in full force and effect and ordered Halco to immediately be required to carry out the provisions of that order.

According to the ruling, Halco had been ordered by the city to install a second exit from the second and third stories of the apartment building.

Hastings said that the plaintiffs' evidence as to an exemption of the property from the requirements of Life Safety Code and Fire Prevention Code "does not meet the burden of proof."

Equalization Session Is Over

The Lancaster County Board of Equalization Wednesday closed its 1973 session after making valuation changes on only three of the 98 real estate appeals brought before it.

Of the 98 real estate appeals filed, three were withdrawn, no one appeared on 18 and the majority of the board made no change on the remainder including more than 30 cases which are pending in Lancaster District Court from last year's appeals and for which the property owners filed another protest this year.

The board also unanimously voted no change on the only personal property appeal which was brought by Lancaster County's largest taxpayer — the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Although most of the real estate decisions were unanimous, in several cases new Commissioner Jan Gauger opposed the no change decision of the other two members of the board.

Johnson Criticizes Exon Tax Policy

State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson Wednesday jumped into the donnybrook over whether a tax cut should be enacted this year, saying Gov. J. James Exon wants to keep taxes from going down this year so that the cut can come when he is campaigning for re-election.

"The governor has been talking about holding the line on taxes to keep them from going up, but now Exon wants to hold the line to keep taxes from going down even though it appears the collections are way over predictions.

"Exon, knowing the collections are more than enough to meet the budget, should have asked the Unicameral for a sales and income tax reduction," Johnson, a Republican, said.

commended for taking action to reduce taxes and stop the 'borrowing' from the taxpayer."

LT&T Reports 1973 Earnings Will Fall Within Legal Limits

The Nebraska Public Service Commission reported Wednesday that Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s earnings for calendar 1973 are expected to fall within that allowed by law.

Data furnished the commission by LT&T indicates that the firm anticipates a 7.61% rate of return, well within the maximum 7.75% permitted by the commission, it was reported.

Earlier information showed that LT&T's earnings for 1972 exceeded the maximum allowable rate by almost 1%. The commission subsequently requested LT&T's financial statement for the first quarter of 1973.

LT&T's rate of return for 1973 falls within that allowed, according to the commission, when the construction budget, stock issues, wage increases, increased financing costs, service improvements and higher taxes are considered.

LT&T cited a record 1973 construction budget of $18.1 million, nearly double LT&T's 1970 construction budget, as a major reason for the projected decrease in the rate of return.

The company reported that major improvements planned or completed for 1973 include $10.3 million for expansion and replacement of facilities in the company's 22-county territory. Some of those improvements are $2.3 million for electronic switching facilities at Lincoln and new central office equipment at Davenport, Fairmont and Milford.

Some $688,000 in improved one- and four-party rural telephone service has been scheduled at Bellwood, Burchard, Clay Center, DeWitt, Gresham, Guide Rock, Kenesaw, Ruskun and Waverly.

The company also proposes to issue $8 million in preferred stock on June 1 to finance the proposed additions

Power Review Board Asked To OK Wholesale Service Pact

The Nebraska Public Power District and the Norris Public Power District Wednesday asked the State Power Review Board to approve a wholesale service area agreement affecting a five-county area, including Lancaster County.

Don Schaufelberger, deputy general manager for NPPD, told the board that the joint agreement delineating which municipalities and areas will be served by which power wholesaler would allow the two districts to provide "Reliable wholesale power at reasonable price" without any duplication of effort.

"The agreement," Schaufelberger said, "will minimize duplication of sub-transmission facilities and investment which might arise out of disputes over service to wholesale customers."

The five-county area affected is Lancaster, Gage, Jefferson, Thayer and Saline Counties.

Those customers served by NPPD under the agreement would be Adams, Alexandria, Beatrice, Belvidere, Blue Springs, Bruning, Byron, Carleton, Chester, Clatoma, Cortland, Crete, Davenport, Daykin, Deshler, DeWitt, Dorchester, Farbury, Firth, Friend, Hallam, Hebron, Hubbell, Lincoln, Pickrell, Plymouth, Swanton, Tobias, Virginia, Wymore and Western.

All other wholesale customers would be supplied with power from Norris.

It's sort of like your grandfather telling you he used to walk 15 miles through the snow to get to school.

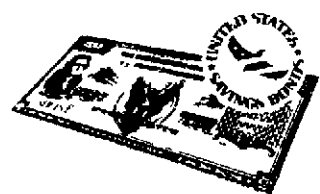

But it's true today's working men and women have more advantages than their grandparents.

One of them is the Payroll Savings Plan—the easy, safe, automatic way to build a nest egg for the future.

When you sign up for the Payroll Savings Plan, an amount you specify is automatically set aside from your paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplaine

Hong Kong — Storm clouds building up over the South China sea. There's a smell of rain in the air. The room is air-conditioned but I managed to pry a window open for a smell of outside. I turned the air-conditioning off.

The room boy comes by while I'm out. He jams the window shut. Turns the air-conditioning on "high".

We are at Lee Gardens. There are 900 rooms mostly full of Japanese. The Japanese come in great cheap charter tours.

Thirty percent of Hong Kong's tourists are Japanese, said the hotel man.

They pop off in the morning to shop — Hong Kong is one enormous free-port shopping center. They come back in the evening, each hand full of shopping bags.

What do they buy? They buy Japanese cameras and Japanese watches. Maybe a Japanese motorcycle or two.

The hotel man said: "High prices in Japan and the high Japanese purchase tax makes Hong Kong a bargain."

You can buy anything in Hong Kong (including raw money — it's one of the four big money markets of the world.)

Japanese or Swiss watches (The Swiss watches are sometimes counterfeit. They can make a Swiss watch cheaper than the Swiss will sell it.) You can buy American gold coins (Also often counterfeit. Same amount of gold. Exact copy. But it wasn't minted in the U.S.)

Most people buy clothes. Alas, the tailor-made suits at $50 have gone up to $150.

We can now buy Red China goods. The porcelains are top grade. The manufactured stuff is cheap and cheaply put together.

Hongkong — (the newspapers here spell it as one word) — is said to mean "Fragrant Harbor."

An American, old China hand, said: "It depends on how you read the Chinese ideograph. There are some Chinese who tell you it means 'Bad smelling water'."

The town was founded by British traders on the highest principles of free enterprise.

In 1841 they complained that the Chinese were being fearfully obstinate. The Chinese would not let them sell opium from India.

The Chinese said: "You do not allow opium sales in India."

The British traders said: "But you see we own India." (They wondered why the Chinese were so stupid about such things.) They said: "We make 5% million pounds selling you opium. Are you a Communist or something?"

The British moved a gunboat into the Pearl River. The Chinese then saw the wisdom of free trade and civilization. The opium trade started again. And Hong Kong became a British Crown Colony.

If you want to go into Red China, you go down the Queen's Road to China Travel Agency and ask for a visa.

I said: "Then what happens?"

He said: "Then they say no. Usually. They say: 'Who invited you?' Naturally, it's hard to get invited until you can get into Red China to meet someone to issue an invitation."

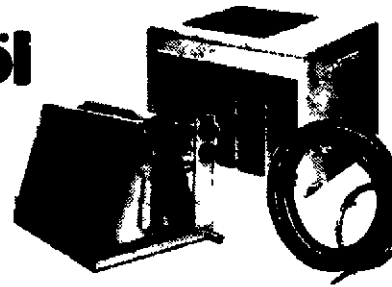

Even so, Shirley McLaine came out yesterday. (Don't know who invited her.) And some CBS people were in Red China for three weeks.

JOHNCOCK WAS SHORTENED '500'

... Rain Halts Race At 332.5 Miles

TIMBER LINES

Star Sports Writer

Bullheads Vs. Bluegills

Which is the easiest fish for the beginning angler to catch? Which one is the most fun to catch and, not the least important, which is the better to eat?

Those questions once asked before a group of anglers often result in long arguments as each fisherman has his own ideas about which fish a beginning angler should be broken in on.

The criteria is simple: first, the species must be easy to get to and, second, simple to catch. Otherwise, the prospective angler might become discouraged and just say the heck with it all and take up some other sport.

New York Times outdoor editor, Nelson Bryant, thinks that the brown bullhead is one of the easiest fish for the beginning angler to catch. Bryant explains his reasoning as tackle is simple — a cane pole or small rod and reel with a bobber, sinker and hook — and "ordinary earth worms or night crawlers are probably the most popular bait."

Bryant goes on to explain that, unlike some species, notably the northern pike, bullheads feed at all hours of the day and night with dusk getting the nod as the best time.

Bullheads also are so prolific and tough that they usually succeed in overpopulating any body of water they are in unless they are in a heavily-fished region. And they taste good.

"In the heyday of the pullman car era," Bryant says, "bullheads were often served to unknowing passengers as trout and few knew the difference."

Of course, one disadvantage to the bullhead is its fabled horns. An unknowing angler taking his first bullhead off the hook is just likely to spear his finger on one.

That, some seasoned anglers argue, is the reason bluegills or crappie are the best for a beginning fisherman.

The bluegill is easy to catch — the basic equipment is the same, though they can be caught on artificials as well — and they are equally as numerous and fun to catch. Also, they do not swallow the hook as often as bullheads which means taking them off the line is simpler.

New Organization

Whatever fish a beginning angler tries out first, the fact remains that that fish will always be the one for others to catch — if he has any luck at all.

And if he gets caught up in the sport, he may well become a member of the new American League of Anglers that was recently organized in Washington.

The organization will be based in Washington and will, among other things, lobby at the state and federal level in defense of fishermen's interest and may draft, sponsor, and, if necessary, oppose legislation pertaining to fishing.

The nonprofit organization would provide the sport fisherman with national representation willing to go to bat for him and could solve problems that may arise between state and federal legislation.

Perhaps one of the more intense conflicts is between sport and commercial fishermen. Up to now, the commercial man has had all the backing. Now, the sportsman may get a little to offset that.

But the league will not be attempting to supercede the activities of certain well-established angler organizations. There will always be a need for the highly-motivated special interest group.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Pint-sized Gordon Johncock won the tragic, rain-shortened 57th Indianapolis 500-mile race Wednesday that cost one crewman his life and sent driver Swede Savage to a hospital with critical injuries.

Johncock, a 36-year-old campaigner who lives in nearby Franklin, Ind., brought his orange-colored Eagle Offenhauser across the finish line 1 minute and 25 seconds ahead of Billy Vukovich as rain pelted the 2 1/2-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The winning margin of victory, originally announced as 30 seconds, was changed two hours after the finish by a U.S. Auto Club official.

The rain came on the 128th lap and race officials flagged the event to a halt five laps later. It was the shortest race in Indianapolis history.

The 18-year racing veteran, never a big winner, covered the 332 1/2 miles in 2 hours, 5 minutes and 27.66 seconds for an average speed of 159.014 miles per hour.

When the purse of more than $1 million is divided, the 150-pound, 5-foot-7 winner will pick up in excess of $200,000.

Third place in the unofficial standings went to 42-year-old Roger McCluskey of Tucson, Ariz. Mel Kenyon, a battle-scarred veteran from Lebanon, Ind., placed fourth, while fifth place went to Gary Bettenhausen of Tinley Park, Ill.

Johncock, a ruggedly handsome blond who has driven just about every type of racing car, inherited a lead he was never to surrender after 1970-1971 winner Al Unser suffered engine problems on the 70th lap around the battered old course.

By that time, however, most of the pre-race favorites either had left the race or were limping around with faulty machines.

The race was flagged to an abrupt halt on the 59th lap when Savage, a 26-year-old from Santa Ana, Calif., lost control of his Eagle-Offy and slammed against the two retaining walls coming out of the Speedway's fourth turn.

The car broke in half, with the front part exploding into a ball of flame. Savage, the victim of a near-fatal crash in California two years ago, was hospitalized in critical condition with a broken left arm and left leg, burns on the face, arms and hands and possible corneal damage.

Moments after the crash, a fire truck heading the wrong way down pit road toward the accident ran squarely into 22-year-old Armando Teran of Culver City, Calif. Teran died just over an hour later of multiple injuries.

It was the second death in a tragic month of May at Indianapolis.

Art Pollard, a 45-year-old veteran from Medford, Ore., lost control of his racer and crashed in flames during a prequalifying warmup session May 12. He was the 34th driver to lose his life since the Speedway was opened in 1911.

A crowd of only about 20,000, compared to 350,000 Monday, watched Johncock win the 500 on his ninth attempt.

The official results will not be posted until Thursday morning, but the scoreboard listed the sixth through 10th place finishers as Steve Krisloff, rookie Lee Kunzman, John Martin, pole-position starter Johnny Rutherford, and Mike Mosley.

The Savage accident was the third major one in three days. David "Salt" Walther, 25, of Dayton, Ohio, was badly burned in a multi-car crash in an aborted start of the race Monday, its original running date.

Two other drivers were slightly injured and nine spectators hospitalized from flames that seared them when Walther's machine climbed the fence along the front stretch.

Johncock had qualified in 11th position at a speed of 192.555 m.p.h. and had been listed among the favorites despite much higher time trial speeds of some of the other drivers.

He had been running strongly all day, but his task was made easier with dropouts and mechanical failures of his chief contenders.

The 1972 winner, Mark Donohue of Newtown, Pa., was never a factor and saw any chances he had of making it two in a row vanish when his Roger Penske Eagle developed valve trouble just after the 200-mile mark.

Bobby Unser, the 1969 winner, who had qualified No. 2 in the front row, got a lap behind during the early part of the race because of a lengthy pit stop. But he was making up time when his Eagle quit after 260 miles.

A. J. Foyt's bid for an unprecedented fourth triumph wound up in miserable failure.

The 38-year-old Texan had started 23rd in the field — his poorest in his 16 years at the Speedway — and was moving up on the leaders when his Coyote expired with engine problems.

The old pro wasn't finished, however. He climbed into teammate George Snider's machine, only to have it quit 50 miles later.

The huge crowd that turned out for Monday's original start saw only part of one lap before Walther's crash and a downpour sent them home damp and bedraggled.

At least 175,000 came back Tuesday for another frustrating day, and another rain postponement.

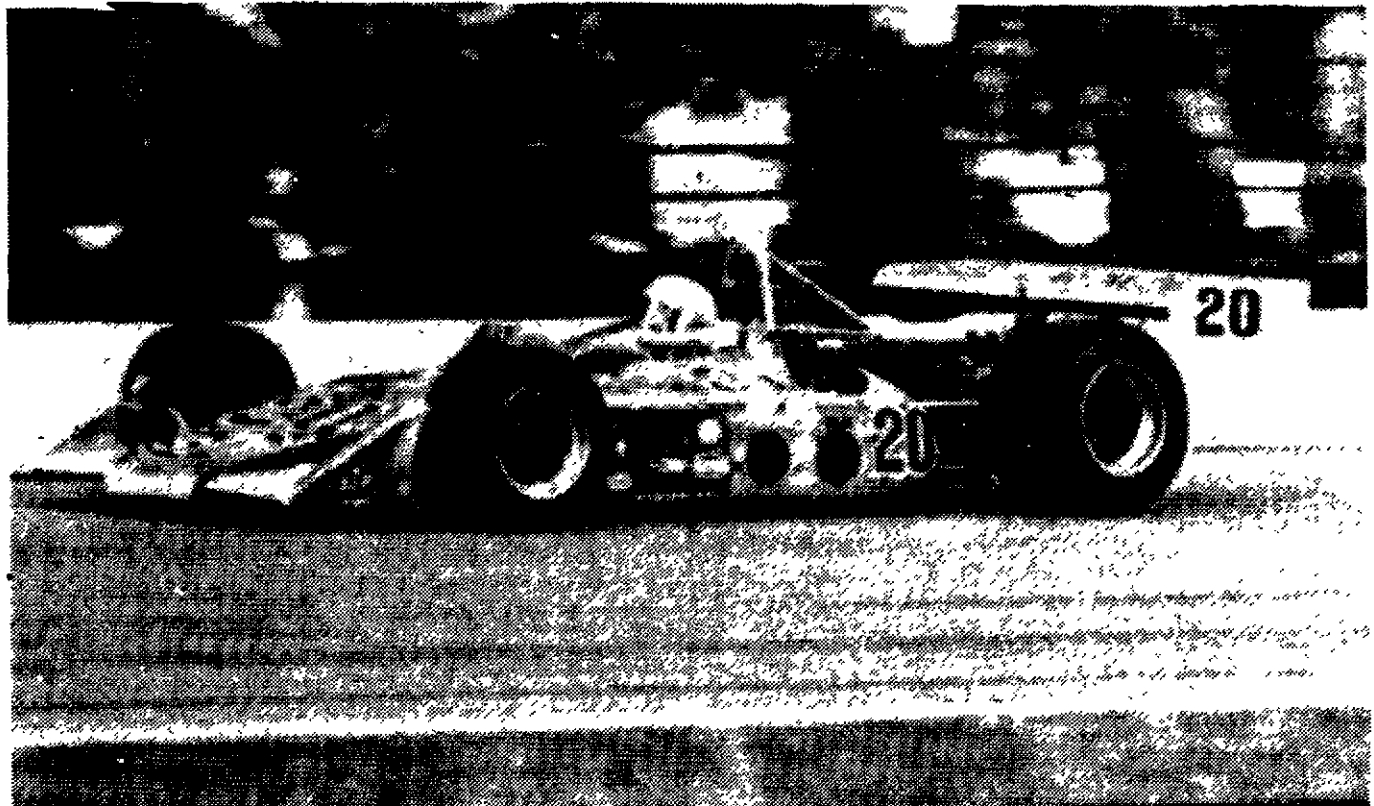

And by the time the field began running for good Wednesday only an estimated 20,000 of the faithful had returned.

Mario Andretti, the 1969 winner and a three-time national driving champion, was sidelined by a burned piston after only four turns around the track Wednesday.

It also was a frustrating day for rookie Bobby Allison, the stock car ace who won more than $300,000 in prize on Dixie ovals last year.

Allison's mount developed an electrical shortage even before it was rolled to its 12th place starting spot. When the order to start engines came, the machine malfunctioned again and the 35-year-old Hueytown, Ala., driver was left sitting while the 31 other starters rolled off on the pace lap.

Finally, the engine blew up as he was making his first lap under power.

JOHNCOCK... wins abbreviated Indy '500'.

Johncock Checked From Rushing To Savage

Indianapolis (AP) — Gordon Johncock, dark horse winner of the rain-shortened 57th Indianapolis 500, disclosed Wednesday that he had to be restrained from running to the side of teammate Swede Savage, whose car crashed and burned on the 59th lap.

"We were in the pits after the red flag," said the 36-year-old veteran who scored in his ninth Speedway attempt. "I knew Swede was in trouble. I had a sick feeling. After all, we had been together racing the same automobiles for the month of May."

"I started up the track and A.J. Foyt held me back." The new Indianapolis 500 champion is a doughy little man from nearby Franklin, Ind., who at 5-feet-7 and 150 pounds reminds one of a handsome Mickey Rooney.

"He is cocky and tough and one hell of a driver," one of his teammates said.

The snub-nosed, curly-haired veteran of stock car sprint, roadster and championship racing said that he had not kept his eye on the threatening skies and did not plan his race for a possible early ending.

He also said that he was not disturbed that he did not have the satisfaction of seeing a checkered flag — the dream of every auto racer. The flag man hoisted only the red flag, halting the race when rain started falling heavily after 133 laps and the checkered flag of victory was never used.

"I am happy I won," Johncock said. "But I would like to have seen the race go the full 500 miles. I would have liked to have gone the whole distance."

Johncock started racing as a youngster, making the circuit of stock car and roadster competition before moving into the championship air field in the early 1960s. He had started in the eight previous 500s, with his best finishes being fifth in 1965 and fourth in 1966.

He was involved in a major accident on the northeast No. 3 turn early in the 1971 race and was eliminated after completing 11 laps. However, he escaped with only minor injuries and competed in nine other championship races that season.

Gordon Johncock

At the presentation ceremony in Victory Lane, Johncock gulped down the traditional glass of milk for which he was paid $10,000 and lavished the usual praises on his chief mechanic, George Bignotti, his pit crew and his sponsor, Andy Granatelli.

"The car ran great and the crew did a wonderful job for me," the driver said. "I am also indebted to Andy Granatelli for sponsoring the car."

Fonner Park's Pari-Mutuel Tax Sets Record

Grand Island — A record payment of $522,138.60 was made to the Nebraska Department of Revenue by Fonner Park for the 5 per cent pari-mutuel tax.

This, along with state sales tax payments of $4,509.18 will go into the state's general fund.

Another $22,327.65 was paid to the Nebraska State Racing Commission, which included $21,079.65 in admission taxes, and $1,248.00 for employee's licenses by Fonner Park. These funds are earmarked for all of the Nebraska county fairs held each summer.

Fonner Park's proceeds for the race meet go into its program for educational, charitable, civic, agricultural activities, and capital improvements. The facilities at Fonner Park are available to any non-profit, civic, or benevolent group for a minimal fee to defray part of the cost for holding each event.

Registration Sites Corrected For Boys

Some dropped lines of type in the Sunday Journal and Star resulted in some confusion over a couple of registration sites for the Lincoln Recreation Department's Boys City Baseball program.

Registration will be held at 1 p.m. Monday with boys in the Meadowlark district registering at Meadowlark School, 72nd and Vine, with coach Steve McKelvey and the Antelope district meeting at Southeast High School, 37th and Van Dorn, with coach Rod Stall.

SAVAGE, CAR SEPARATE... Swede Savage (lower left) leaves main body of car when his racer exploded after hitting retaining wall.

National Risk Wins Ak Feature

Omaha — The Kansas City Racing Stable's National Risk scored a virtual wire-to-wire decision here Wednesday at Aksar-Ben to win the featured seventh race.

Ray Schuyler's Pro Raja finished second while Country Jean edged Mighty Kameha for the show spot in the chase for $5,000.

National Risk, the favorite of the seven entrants returned $5.40, $3.80 and $3.00 while Pro Raja paid $3.80 and $3.00. Country Jean showed for $5.00.

Nicklaus To Skip Kemper Tourney

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — With Jack Nicklaus taking a break, Bruce Crampton of Australia and Lee Trevino have a chance to play catch-up this week in the $200,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament.

They rank second and third behind Nicklaus' leading $178,064 on the money-winning list this year. Each has held the lead at one time or another and either one could retake the top spot with a victory here, worth $40,000. Crampton has $187,551 and Trevino $142,978.

They rank as the co-favorites in a strong, 144-man field arrayed for the 72-hole test that begins Thursday on the 7,278 yard, par 72 Quail Hollow Country Club course.

Between them, they've won

Vranas' Dogs Sweep Honors

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Vrana of Schuyler took three top honors with their rottweiler, "Panamint Jolie vd Eichen, C.D." over the weekend for the Greater Lincoln Obedience Club.

The Vranas took winners' bitch and best of opposite sex in the Sioux Falls Kennel Club show, the Sioux Empire Kennel Club show in Sioux City, and the Nebraska Kennel Club show in Omaha.

The Vranas also captured two point wins each with "Lucky Lanes M'Lady Frolic," a cardigan Welsh corgi, as winners' bitch and best of opposite sex in the out-state shows.

Lincoln club winners were: At Sioux Falls Kennel Club, Sioux Falls, S.D., "Panamint Jolie vd Eichen, C.D." rottweiler, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ben Vrana, Schuyler, winners' bitch and best of opposite sex; "Lucky Lanes M'Lady Frolic," a cardigan Welsh corgi, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Vrana, winners' bitch; best of winners' bitch breed over special (2 pt.), "Minstrel Magic of Mayfield," standard poodle, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Hinderks, Douglas, winners' day (2 pt.). At Sioux Empire Kennel Club, Sioux City, Ia., "Panamint Jolie vd Eichen, C.D." rottweiler, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Vrana, winners' bitch; best of opposite sex, "Lucky Lanes M'Lady Frolic," a cardigan Welsh corgi, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Vrana, winners' bitch; best of opposite sex (2 pt.), "Champion of the Mid night Sun," Siberian husky, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Steve Carpenter, puppy bitches at Nebraska Kennel Club, Omaha, "Panamint Jolie vd Eichen, C.D." rottweiler, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Vrana, winners' bitch; best of winners' bitch breed (1 pt.), "Diamonds Gambling Man," English springer spaniel, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Hinderks, first in puppy dogs, "My Fair Lady of Donnybrook," Dalmatian, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ruckdushe, Lincoln, winners' bitch and best of winners (2 pt.), "Marsteds Patriotic Affair," English springer spaniel, owned by Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Roshe, earning C.D. degree with 195 score qualifying for Canine Award of Distinction in Obedience completion.

five tournaments this year, three by Crampton and two by Trevino. Perhaps significantly, however, only one of those—Trevino's triumph in the Jackie Gleason—has come in an event in which Nicklaus played. He was absent in the others.

"When Jack isn't playing, it's anybody's ball game," said veteran Chi Chi Rodriguez, another of the leading contenders here. "But if he's going to tee it up, well, you can just about forget about it."

Crampton and Trevino each finished second by a stroke in his previous start—Crampton to Tom Weiskopf at Colonial in Fort Worth and Trevino to Dave Hill at Memphis—and each is coming off a brief rest.

While they're favored, it's by a narrow margin. Even though Nicklaus is missing, the field is one of the strongest of the year. Included are Arnold Palmer, South African Gary Player, Billy Casper, defending title-holder Doug Sanders and Masters champ Tommy Aaron.

Shoff Resigns Auburn Position

Auburn—Lew Shoff, head football coach at Auburn High School for the past five seasons, has resigned that post to accept an insurance job in Lincoln.

He will be succeeded by Richard Birdsley, who guided Hebron to the Lincoln Journal and Star state Class C football championship last fall.

Shoff, a South assistant coach for this summer's Shrine Bowl game, broke into coaching in the 6-man ranks at Riverton where he spent two years.

He then coached 8-man ball at Mitchell Sunflower before spending three years as an assistant and two as head coach at Class B Kimball.

In seven years as an 11-man head coach, Shoff has compiled a 44-17-2 record, including a 31-12-2 mark at Auburn. His best seasons at Auburn were 9-0 in 1970 and 8-1 in 1971.

Birdsley spent six seasons as an assistant to Ted Mills at Hebron before guiding the Bears to a 10-0 mark last season.

Police Seek Pay, Manpower Hikes

A Lincoln Police Department negotiating team is trying to obtain a 25% increase in manpower and a 20% increase in pay.

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf confirmed Wednesday that the city's negotiating committee is working on the police team's request.

The recently created police negotiating team is seeking funding for 54 additional police officers to augment the current 200-man force.

Those 54 men would probably include the 20 additional men proposed by Schwartzkopf for funding by federal revenue sharing money. The mayor has proposed that $200,000 be allocated to hire and equip 20 additional men.

Additionally, the police are seeking an across-the-board wage increase.

Such a pay boost would up the base starting pay from $646 to around $775 per month.

To back up the requests, the negotiating team is using a study comparing Lincoln's salaries with nine other cities in the nation.

Other cities surveyed included Gary, Ind., Peoria, Ill., Rockford, Ill., Madison, Wis., Kansas City, Kan., Colorado Springs, Colo., Amarillo, Tex., Topeka, Kan., and Little Rock, Ark.

Prepared By Police Attorney Charles Huff, executive secretary of the Region II Crime Commission, noted that the study was prepared by law enforcement officials at the commission's request.

Huff said that every year at budget time, the Crime Commission supports the Lincoln Police Department and the Lancaster County Sheriff Department's requests for additional manpower and funding.

At the May commission meeting, chairman Roger Larson was directed to write a letter to the police and sheriff departments asking what their manpower needs are for the coming year and how current wages compare to other law enforcement agencies.

Eighth In Pay The study revealed that Lincoln placed eighth in pay. With a 20% salary increase, Lincoln would place third among the nine other cities surveyed.

Additionally, the study showed that: — Lincoln placed last in the number of police officers per 1,000 population. Gary, Ind., placed first with 2.35 policemen per 1,000 people compared to Lincoln's 1.23.

Adding 54 policemen would move Lincoln up the list to 1.69 policemen per 1,000 people. That is the average among the cities studied.

— Lincoln placed nine out of ten in the cost per citizen for police services — at $16.33. Gary is first at $33.71, while Amarillo, Tex., placed last at $14.93. The average cost per citizen is $24.77. While the area of Lincoln increased almost 100% in the last 12 years, manpower has increased about 33%.

— While auto accidents have increased by 102% between 1964 and 1972, manpower has increased 15% during the same period.

— Police calls have increased about 90% during the past two years.

— While the actual crime rate in Lincoln has jumped 50% in the last four years, manpower has increased only 5%.

Although no exact figures are available on what it would cost to hire and equip 54 additional officers, one estimates centers on the $700,000 mark.

Police officials have said federal funds might be sought to help pay for the additional men.

Huff said the Crime Commission has not yet been approached to give such funding.

However, he commented, "It has always been one of our priorities that we help upgrade the criminal justice system and law enforcement."

Colombian Airliner Is Hijacked

MEDELLIN, Colombia (AP)—Two masked hijackers with submachine guns commandeered a Colombian airliner with 89 persons aboard Wednesday and forced it to the Caribbean island of Aruba. They demanded $200,000 and freedom for 140 "political prisoners."

Pilot Jorge Lucena radioed the Medellin control tower from the Dutch island that the young hijackers, who wanted to take the prisoners to Cuba, had set a 9 p.m. EDT deadline for Colombian action to meet their demands.

The Caracol radio network said the hijackers threatened to blow up the four-engine Electra turboprop and the passengers if the demands were not met. The 9 p.m. deadline passed with no report of action by the government or the terrorists.

Eighteen of the passengers — women and children — were allowed to get off the plane at Aruba in two groups of nine. That left 71 aboard, including the hijackers, said to be leftist guerrillas.

The plane remained at the Aruba airport. The pilot said in a shaky voice: "Negotiations with the government should be accelerated."

Lucena said the hijackers wanted the political prisoners taken with the ransom money to Panama, where they would be picked up by the hijacked plane and flown to Cuba.

About 150 persons, accused of having guerrilla connections, were arrested in Colombia last year in an official campaign against the leftist National Liberation Army. Only about 40 of those arrested remain in custody.

Judge Says Douglas Co. May Be 'Legally Liable'

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—A District Court judge told the Douglas County Board Wednesday that the county may be "legally liable" for damages to property along the North Platte River caused by high water.

Judge Ralph Tesar, who owns a cabin along the river, said he has lost 10 feet of land to erosion recently.

"And," he said, "I've lost two trees that were more than 50 years old."

The judge said his "offhand opinion" is that "if they (county authorities) have notice of a condition and don't take steps to remedy it, I think they are liable."

Tesar said part of the problem is that on the Saunders County side of the river, old cars and other materials have been

Scotts Bluff Probation Officers Resigns

GERING, Neb. (AP)—The chief juvenile probation officer of Scotts Bluff county, Marvin E. Ready, Wednesday announced his resignation.

He is the third area law enforcement official to leave office this month.

The resignation, effective July 1, followed by days similar announcement by Scottsbluff Police Chief James Teal and Sheriff Jim Miller.

Ready assumed the position in September of 1969 with a case load of 50 juveniles. Currently, the county probation office handles approximately 500 juveniles and adults.

County Court Judge Glenn Camerer said deputy juvenile probation officer Angel Ybarra will fill the vacancy created by Ready's resignation.

In a news release, Judges James L. Macken and Camerer said "we regret Mr. Ready's decision to leave his present position and commend him for the fine work he has done with juveniles in Scotts Bluff County."

Ready said he would use accrued vacation time beginning tomorrow to seek law enforcement employment in the North Platte area. He said "no comment" when asked why he was leaving the post. Ybarra is a former employee of the Nebraska State Patrol and a Scotts Bluff County deputy sheriff. He has been deputy probation officer since October of 1972.

Authorities Suspect Spotted Fever Case

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Nebraska may have its first case of Rocky Mountain spotted fever since 1969, State Health Department authorities reported Wednesday.

Preliminary tests "show some evidence" an 11-year-old Lincoln girl has the infection, said Dr. Russ Currier, staff epidemiologist. He said more tests will be conducted when she feels better.

The fever is transmitted by wood ticks. Nebraska authorities said there is a marked increase in the wood tick population in the state this spring.

Reasons for this population boom are unknown, officials said, but persons hiking in wooded areas throughout eastern Nebraska are reporting many ticks.

Currier said the fever can be serious. Untreated, the mortality rate is from 15 to 20 per cent.

Jade Collection Reported Stolen

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—A collection of jade figurines that was termed "priceless" by its owner was taken from an Omaha apartment during a burglary earlier this week.

Omaha Det. Harley Godberson said the collection of Ernst F. Lied, a retired automobile company executive was taken Tuesday.

Godberson said Lied's apartment was entered and one glass case of antique figures and a .38 caliber pistol were taken.

Lied told officers that the collection was worth "thousands and thousands of dollars." He said he had collected the hand-carved figures from all over the world.

$3,834 Given To Red Cross

The Lancaster County Red Cross reported Wednesday that contributions to the emergency disaster relief fund totaled $3,834. The county's goal is $9,420.

The drive is to replace money spent on natural disasters across the country, including funds that are being depleted to aid victims of the record 196 tornadoes which swept through the Midwest states over the Memorial Day weekend.

treated it is less than one per cent, he said. Symptoms are high fever, chills, muscle aches and a rash.

The Lincoln girl picked up the tick in Lancaster County about May 10, became ill some days later, and entered the hospital May 23, Currier said.

They warned, however, not to jerk them off the skin because the body may come loose, leaving the head imbedded.

Among methods of removal are using tweezers, rubbing on alcohol, gasoline, kerosene or an insect repellent, or holding a lighted cigarette nearby to make them back out.

Retired Medic Said Apparent Suicide Victim

A retired Ponca City, Okla., physician was found dead in his car in a closed garage Wednesday afternoon, according to police reports.

Police said Dr. Warner W. Mall, 68, of 5018 Goldenrod, who had lived in Lincoln for approximately two months, was found in the car with his engine still running by his granddaughter.

According to police, a suicide note was found in Dr. Mall's wallet.

Shell Oil Will Limit Gas Sales

By The Associated Press

Shell Oil Co. announced Wednesday that it will limit the amount of gasoline it will sell its service stations starting Friday.

Texaco said it would ration drivers to 10 gallons at its stations on toll roads.

The new restrictions fell into a growing industry pattern of allocating supplies as a result of the nation's gas shortage. Exxon Co. U.S.A. and Gulf Oil Co. took similar steps on Tuesday.

"Allocation programs instituted by other gasoline marketers in recent weeks appear to have had the effect of a run on the bank at many Shell service stations," said a Shell vice president, Frank H. Staub.

"Our gasoline sales through April of this year are 12 per cent ahead of last year," he said in a statement in Houston. "Our inventory position has been depleted and sales currently exceed our manufacturing capability."

A Texaco spokesman in Cleveland said that, effective immediately, the company was limiting purchasers to 10 gallons of gas and 35 gallons of diesel at all its stations on the nation's tollways. He said the diesel limit would be reduced to 25 gallons if the supply situation requires.

FTC Says Flammable Plastics Falsely Advertised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission Wednesday alleged that 26 chemical firms falsely advertised flammable plastics as non-flammable or self-extinguishing.

It also named as defendants the plastic industry's trade association and the testing firm that set the flammability standards used by the industry.

The plastics involved are cellular — or foamed — polyurethane and all forms of polystyrene. More than one billion pounds of these plastics were marketed in 1972 for use in construction and home furnishings.

The plastics are used for insulation, furniture cushions and bedding, panels and siding, cabinets, chairs, tables, pipes and lighting and plumbing fixtures. They also are used in airplane interiors and in the trouble-plagued Skylab space station.

The FTC alleged in its proposed class action complaint that the plastics not only burn faster and produce more heat than conventional building materials but that they also produce great amount of toxic gases.

Traces of these poisonous gases have been found in the bloodstreams of airline passengers killed by fire. Poisoning has not been listed as the cause of death, but tests conducted by the Federal Aviation Administration show the gases can reach lethal or incapacitating levels in airliner fires before all the passengers can be evacuated.

The FTC said the 26 firms named in its complaint have known directly or indirectly since 1967 that the plastics constituted serious fire hazards but failed to disclose this to buyers.

It alleged the firms knew the test standards permitting these descriptions were invalid for determining how the products would behave in actual fires and that the firms failed to take adequate or effective actions to eliminate or minimize risks of injury or damage.

The FTC alleged that although the testing firm ran the flammability tests, the companies and the trade association helped set up the standards.

The FTC asked that the firms halt the alleged misrepresentations, and that the tests for burning characteristics be discontinued and their alleged unreliability be made known to purchasers.

It also asked the firms to give clear warnings as to possible fire hazards and to set up a program of precautionary, remedial and corrective action to eliminate or minimize fire hazards in existing buildings.

The Society of the Plastics Industry Inc. had no comment on the proposed complaint.

Under FTC rules, the firms may agree to the FTC remedies without admitting any guilt or they may ask for a hearing by an administrative law judge.

The Society of the Plastics Industry Inc. said it was shocked by the FTC's action because it had been working "on its own initiative" to improve flammability research and test methods.

Society President Ralph L. Harding Jr. said the industry's research program was announced less than a month ago and that it is "actually tailor-made to comply with FTC's proposals." Harding said the society project was designed to develop information on the ignitability, flame spread, heat release, smoke and toxic gas emissions of plastic products.

Named in the complaint were the following firms and associations:

The Society of the Plastics Industry, Inc., New York City; American Society for Testing and Materials, Philadelphia; Allied Chemical Corp., Morristown, N.J.; BASF Wyandotte Corp., Parsippany, N.J.; Baychem Corp., New York City; Cook Paint and Varnish Co., North Kansas City, Mo.; The Dow Chemical Co., Midland,

Schmidt Named To Head FDA

CHICAGO (AP) — Dr. Alexander M. Schmidt, dean of one of the University of Illinois medical schools, has been named head of the Food and Drug Administration, the university said Wednesday.

A university spokesman confirmed a report in the Chicago Daily News that Schmidt had been named to the post.

Schmidt, 48, is dean of the Abraham Lincoln School of Medicine in Chicago, one of six medical schools in the university.

It is expected that he will leave about Aug. 1 to succeed Dr. Charles Edwards, who has been appointed undersecretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Formerly with the National Institutes of Health in Washington, Schmidt has been at the university since December 1968. He is a graduate of Northwestern University and attended the University of Utah School of Medicine, where he later was a member of the faculty.

FEC Directors Named In Suit

Jacksonville, Fla. (AP) — Directors of the Florida East Coast railway have conspired to loot the line's assets, says a federal suit filed by minority of stockholder Jacob K. Stein of Ohio.

The suit was filed after an attorney for Stein and two other minority shareholders failed to block a plan for converting first mortgage bonds of the Miami-Jacksonville railroad into common stock.

New Abortion Law May Affect Claims

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Nebraska's new abortion law may have some influence on insurance policy claims in the state.

Local offices of several major nationwide firms say the decision on covering abortions is up to their national offices, and would be decided whenever a claim came up.

One firm said a woman with a hospitalization policy should be able to at least claim room and board if hospitalized during an abortion.

A spokesman at Mutual of Omaha said generally Mutual's stand has not changed greatly with new laws. Len Tondl said

"It's a complicated thing, made more complicated by legal interpretations."

Tondl said that depending on an individual's policy, abortions — whether therapeutic or voluntary — are covered in the maternity section of the contract. He said the individual patient would have to meet all other provisions.

At Blue Cross an official said the new law hasn't changed its interpretation of policy. Under the standard contract, Blue Cross will pay for abortions in or out of Nebraska under the maternity section providing all contract requirements are met.

Nebraskans Seek Income Tax Deductions For Abortion Costs

OMAHA, NEB. (AP)—Between 150 and 250 Nebraskans may have filed corrections to their federal income tax because of a new deduction for abortion or birth control costs.

Charles O'Grady, the Omaha district director of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) office, said the latest figures indicated more than 5,300 Nebraskans filed forms to amend their 1972 returns. But O'Grady says most of them were for mathematic errors or forgotten W-2 forms or similar causes.

He said the IRS service center in Ogden, Utah estimated from three to five per cent of all amended returns may deal with abortions or birth control.

He said the Omaha district office has received only a few questions about the deduction.

Industrial Court Takes Milligan School Dispute

The State Court of Industrial Relations took under advisement Wednesday a teacher salary dispute involving the Milligan school district.

Before the court was a suit filed by the Milligan Education Association, representing the teachers, seeking a salary settlement after the two parties failed to agree on contract terms for the next school year.

Teachers in the district were paid $6,200 base salaries for the 1972-73 school year with 4% increases for experience and additional education.

The school board's last offer was for a $6,300 base salary with the same experience and education factors.

The teachers, however, last proposed a $6,600 base with 4.5% factors for education and experience. They also asked that health and accident insurance contributions be increased from the present $8 per month to $11 per month.

Cattle Feeding Profit, Loss Check Urged

Omaha (UPI) — An executive of the National Livestock Feeders Association issued an appeal Wednesday for the midwest's cattle feeding industry to take a close look at its profits and loss status.

Don F. Magdanz, NLFA executive vice president, of Omaha, issued letters to leaders of midwestern cattle feeder groups affiliated with the NLFA cautioning about cattle feeding losses and urging the various state feeders groups to meet with their respective extension livestock specialists to make a serious study of cattle feeding economics.

Magdanz said even with cattle prices better than a year ago, some feed cattle are being marketed at a loss and many more will lose money in future weeks and months, because of the considerable increases in cost production.

The NLFA executive added, "It appears our industry needs to go on a 'profit quest' to find what cattle can turn a profit and how."

Iowan Pleads Guilty To Two Check Counts

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — A presentence investigation has been ordered in the case of Lee Bestmann, 32, Shelby, who entered a guilty plea in U.S. District Court here to using two falsified checks to buy $3,000 worth of cattle last year in Massena.

The checks were believed to have been taken from Waterloo, Neb., and Omaha, Neb.

Bestmann entered the plea only a short time after he was sentenced in Audubon County District Court at Audubon to seven years in prison. The sentence was for obtaining property by false pretenses in connection with cattle at the Kimballton Sales Barn last Jan. 10.

Kearney Bank Denied Charter

State banking director Henry E. Ley reported Wednesday his department has rejected the bank charter application filed by the Kearney State Bank.

Representatives of two other banks in Kearney, the First National Bank and the Platte Valley State Bank, had opposed the charter application for a third bank at a hearing in January and February. The present banks contended Kearney did not need the additional bank.

Facts Should Be Dredged Into Open — Agnew

Senate Cuts USIA Budget $31 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Wednesday lopped $31 million from the $224 million the White House sought for next year's budget of the United States Information Agency, the nation's propaganda arm abroad.

Over-all, said Sen. J. W. Fulbright, the agency is a "cold war anachronism."

The Arkansas Democrat's Foreign Relations Committee had recommended cuts, trimming the agency's television and motion picture authorization by 10 per cent, its press and magazine division by 13 per cent and its "top-heavy" administration by 15 per cent.

An amendment by Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., to restore these cuts was defeated 42 to 37.

Agnew said he had made no effort to go "beyond what the general public knows" about the Watergate case because the investigators had enough to do without briefing him on it, and he had "no direct responsibility to act on any of these matters" under investigation.

"It would be a mere point of satisfying my own curiosity," he said, "and that can wait just as everyone else's can."

As the Vice President appeared to tread gently along a narrow line separating loyalty to President Nixon and consideration of his and his party's political futures.

"There's no matter of more important political sensitivity than Watergate, regardless of what the Gallup Poll says," Agnew said, disputing the poll's finding earlier this month that inflation and crime ranked ahead of the Watergate case as a matter of concern among voters.

He renewed his opposition to the televised Senate hearings into the Watergate conspiracy, saying they should be put off until after federal grand juries and the courts explored the possibility of criminal charges. But Agnew said he agreed with Sen. Herman E. Talmadge of Georgia, one of the Democrats on the Senate Investigating Committee, that if the hearings continue, they should focus immediately on the highest level of culpability in the White House.

Asked for his views on why it took President Nixon until last week to offer a specific explanation, Agnew replied:

"I'm confident that he agonized a great amount over these matters, and what might have gone wrong with important diplomatic discussions and policy implementations that were in the process had he not been zealously guarded in protecting the secrecy of these matters."

Noting that he had been informed of the functions of your government are embodied in public notices paid for by government so that all citizens may be informed.

Washington — Vice President Agnew said Wednesday that the facts in the Watergate conspiracy case should be "dredged" into the open quickly so the nation, and the Republican Party, could "get it over with."

He expressed renewed faith that the outcome would demonstrate that President Nixon "is untouched by these matters as far as any direct involvement is concerned."

But he stipulated he had no more knowledge of the truth of the Watergate affair than the average reader of newspaper accounts or viewer of the Senate's televised investigative hearings.

As the Vice President appeared to tread gently along a narrow line separating loyalty to President Nixon and consideration of his and his party's political futures.

"There's no matter of more important political sensitivity than Watergate, regardless of what the Gallup Poll says," Agnew said, disputing the poll's finding earlier this month that inflation and crime ranked ahead of the Watergate case as a matter of concern among voters.

GM Wants Easing Of Standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Motors asked Congress Wednesday to delay and relax 1976 auto emission standards and systematically monitor the company's efforts to curb pollution.

GM President Edward N. Cole said if Congress doubts the firm's good-faith efforts to reduce polluting emissions, it should establish a watchdog over GM.

At the same time, Cole told a Senate subcommittee, Congress should initiate a new study of 1976 standards with an eye toward relaxing them.

Meantime, Cole said, Congress should "consider freezing into law nationwide for several years the 1975 federal interim standards for California."

Those restrictions would be somewhat tighter than the interim 1975 standards for all other states, but much less rigid than regulations scheduled for 1976.

The auto industry recently persuaded the Environmental Protection Agency to suspend for one year the 1975 carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emission standards and replace them with relaxed interim regulations.

Separate and stricter rules were ordered for smoggy California.

Poorest People Would Benefit From U.S. Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — An effort to refocus U.S. foreign aid on acute problem areas of poor nations was announced Wednesday by a majority of the members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

They said they will cosponsor amendments including one to concentrate U.S. aid on food, rural development, nutrition, population growth, health, education and human resources development programs.

"Projects would be selected which most directly benefit the poorest majority of the people in these countries and which enable them to participate more effectively in the development process," the congressmen said in a joint statement.

The revised act would authorize $300 million a year for food and nutrition programs, $150 million for population planning and health, $115 million for education and human resources development, and $60 million for general development.

5,000 Officers Lose Flight Pay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An estimated 5,000 military officers lost their "flight pay" Wednesday and the Pentagon began lobbying in Congress for legislation to restore the bonuses through the end of the year.

Under an appropriations bill passed last year, all non-flying officers with the rank of colonel or above were cut off from the bonuses effective Wednesday.

The law affects more than 5,000 officers, including 467 generals and admirals, and would save an estimated $14.6 million annually.

Brennan Makes Hit With Gals

Washington (UPI) — Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan, a former hard hat union leader, has made a hit with leaders of women's groups by pledging a nationwide "partnership with women" to improve the status of female workers in all areas of the economy.

The Labor Department disclosed Wednesday that Brennan met Tuesday for the first time with representatives of seven national women's organizations, including some women's liberation groups, to talk about the status of women in the work force.

"We really felt the secretary was sincere," one of the women who attended the meeting said. "He really cares about the role of women."

The woman declined to permit use of her name but said her reactions were typical of all the women who attended the two-hour meeting with Brennan and other Labor Department officials.

She said Brennan's reactions and his reception of the women was "refreshing" after their chillier and less productive meetings with his two predecessors, James D. Hodgson and George P. Shultz.

The Labor Department said Brennan pledged "to set up a women's advisory committee in the department to give women increased opportunities in federally supported training programs, to have the department play a prominent role among federal agencies in observance of International Women's Year in 1975 and to push for new advances for women workers by that time."

Omaha Prosecutor Claims City Unable To Shut Smut Theaters

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Omaha City Prosecutor Gary Buccino said Wednesday that city officials will not be able to close smut movie houses for at least six months due to inaction by the Legislature's Judiciary Committee.

He said LB 451, which would enable cities to padlock the theaters as public nuisances, has not been advanced by the committee.

"It appears some senators do not want it advanced for a vote before the Friday closing," Buccino said. "But we need the tools right now that LB 451 would give us."

The bill apparently will be carried over to next year's legislative session.

According to the prosecutor, present laws governing padlocking do not include smut movie houses as public nuisances.

LB 451 would expand padlocking laws to cover smut movie houses, he said.

Buccino's comments came as he was studying a case against Richard O. Berry, manager of the Pussy Cat Theater in Omaha. The theater was raided by the city's vice unit Sunday.

According to police, 89 persons were viewing the movie "Deep Throat" when officers entered the theater. Some prominent Omahans were in the audience, police said.

Buccino said the version shown in Omaha was the same film as that declared obscene by the New York Supreme Court.

The persons in the audience were required to give their names and addresses, but none will be charged with criminal offenses, he said.
